BULK RATE U.S. POSTAGE PAID CARMEL, CA Permit No. 149

OUR 73RD YEAR, NO. 35 — September 3, 1987

School daze

ERIN TOLEN, a kindergartener at River School, looks with trepidation on the huge school bus she is about to board on the first day of school. At least she only has to go through the experience once a day: Erin's mother Denise picks her up at the end of the school day. Students flocked back to school this week as the Carmel Unified School District opened the 1987-88 school year. More photos of the first day of school can be found on page 29. School news can be found on pages 10 and 11. (Holly McFarland photo.)

R-4 hearing draws controversy and huge crowds

By NANCY HILLS

IT CERTAINLY was the biggest draw in town, but it is questionable whether the subject matter was as big a hit.

About 150 to 200 people attended the Aug. 26 Carmel Planning Commission workshop at Carpenter Hall on a controversial specific plan for the R-4 district, which includes the Hayward Lumber Co. lumberyard on the east side of Junipero Avenue between Third and Fourth avenues. The specific plan includes a zoning ordinance for that area.

The public comment period was continued until the Wednesday, Sept. 23 meeting.

Since the meeting, the Carmel City Council has decided to reconsider buying the property. The council determined in closed session to have a committee of Mayor Clint Eastwood and Councilman James Wright investigate property values.

Most speakers at the two and a half hour meeting objected to the proposed density of 66 units per acre along Junipero Avenue, which fronts the commercial district, and 33 units per acre along Torres Street, on the edge of the single-family residential zone.

The plan would allow 57 apartment units — or 73 units if it qualifies for an affordable housing density bonus — at the present location of the Hayward Lumberyard.

A lesser number of apartments would be allowed if commercial space is built. A maximum of more than 11,700 square feet of commercial space is permitted on the Hayward site along Junipero Avenue.

An additional 30 units, 38 with the density bonus, would be allowed on another, smaller lumberyard on the corner of Junipero and Fourth avenues. A maximum of 10,000 square feet of commercial space would be allowed, with a corresponding decrease in the apartment density.

That density is "four times the maximum allowed in Pacific Grove and Marina and three times what is allowed in Seaside," said Clayton Anderson, president of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Neighborhood Association NE, speaking at the meeting for himself and others.

The association also presented the planning commission with more than 1,300 signatures on a petition calling for an environmental impact report on the plan.

The public comments included concerns about increased traffic, parking, and water

Creative solutions

Dear Editor:

Creative solutions must be found for the traffic congestion in our small city if Carmel is to continue to be livable. There is urgent need for a new parking garage. But other solutions are required to help deal with the increased flow of visitors. For example:

How much longer can oversized vehicles be permitted on Carmel's narrow streets? I have observed the struggles of an RV to turn around on a narrow dead-end street; I have dodged them downtown; and this weekend a tour bus-sized private bus parked in a vacant lot on residential Dolores Street. Why, I wonder, should people be permitted to bring their homes-on-wheels into this confusion?

Could we not welcome visitors by turning Ocean Avenue into a pedestrian mall and providing sufficient parking elsewhere, as well as parking on the outskirts for outsize vehicles, with bus transportation into town?

Many concerns are being voiced about community interests. I'm sure solutions could be found if we all address our problems constructively.

Willful destroyers

Dear Editor:

Each morning the walkers, runners and cyclers along Scenic past the state beach note the continuing depradations and degradations of the raiding Vandals and Visigoths.

Up on Scenic, weathered wooden fences show sad gaps, broken teeth in a friendly smile. Boards and stakes have been wrenched and ripped away in darkness to feed beach bonfires.

On the beach itself, easily seen from the road, two fairy circles of wind-twisted small trees, formed over long years, are disappearing. One circle is a remnant of shattered trunks and splintered branches.

Even the stately cypress trees are not safe. Low-spreading green branches, despite being unburnable, are torn away.

Are the rangers and deputies helpless? After all, unlike the motorized litterers, these willful destroyers of public and private property remain in one place for several hours.

Too bad that the brewers can't make their bottles and cans from burnable material. That would both solve the litter disgrace and provide unlimited fire fodder.

They come to enjoy and stay to destroy. Strange, isn't it?

Legislative lapses

Dear Editor:

"Supertrain" is a great idea! Legislators could speed away from Sacramento's ivory castle into the real world of their constituents.

Sen. Ken Maddy, for example, could visit Monterey County before making ridiculous statements like the one he made in The Herald on Aug. 18:

"Why not a high-speed train to bring tourists...to Yosemite or Big Sur?"

The gateway communities have enough staggering problems and everyone in the area knows Big Sur has more than 3 million visitors each year, more than Yosemite, which is already limiting use.

But, then, we wouldn't expect Sen. Maddy to know this because he only visits the area for one of his fund-raisers. Sounds as though he and Sen. Pete Wilson have been doing a little talking.

Imagine what Maddy could learn from Wilson about Big Sur!

Storing water

Dear Editor:

The Pebble Beach fire and the existing extreme fire danger suggest an immediate and long-term need for additional water storage. Until the proposed dam can be properly considered, early installation of pond-reservoir-tank combinations in canyons and arroyos about Carmel Valley could save our homes from fire and flood.

Several such combinations at potential flashfire sites could match effectiveness of a new dam. Water pumped from the Carmel River and existing dams during the river flow season could reduce the downstream flood threat and protect against high-risk fire areas during dry periods.

Water collected and pumped from catchment areas such as condominium complexes and paved areas could augment river and well sources.

Perhaps even the fish could live with this arrangement.

Why not a park?

Dear Editor:

The owner of the Hayward Lumber property is offering the city an ideal alternative to development. We can buy the land occupied by a lumberyard for a park!

As a tradeoff, the owner might be persuaded to reduce his asking price, or to arrange more moderate terms, if the city is willing to permit maximum development of the property that lies across Junipero to the west.

What a spectacular park it would be!

We might well call it Clint Eastwood Park, in honor of a man who has contributed so greatly — in cash — to the preservation of Carmel's environment.

I'd be willing to work for a bond issue or a park district encompassing all of our recreation areas!

Parking proposal

Dear Editor:

Several years ago when the city council in Carmel downzoned the Handley Lumberyard property to R-4 designation in order to prevent the building of any future hotel-motel complex there, the heir of the property noted publicly, if I recall correctly, that the action had caused the property value to diminish dramatically. No doubt he was correct. And thus the need to proceed along the current line of thought — to develop the land with the use of normal R-4 activity which would be the proposed denser land usage inherent in multiple or apartment/condo dwellings.

Whether any agreed-upon density finally permits 53 or 103 or some other number of units, it will certainly add significantly to the water usage and to area population density. And it is hard to imagine that it will provide shelter for any of the elderly living in genteel Carmel squalor as many may currently be forced to do. Is there a solution to the need for the heir to find a responsible way to profit by his father's thoughtfulness in acquiring the property many years ago and any other current city needs?

Without the faintest idea as to what numbers might be accommodated, could I suggest a possible activity that might be investigated? Carmel is currently considering the construction of an expensive multi-story parking facility on the north lot at the Sunset Center.

This will add to the bulky appearance of the existing structure and force more cars into the center of town. Yet there are many who agree that some parking needs exist and that at least a partial solution could be accomplished through the construction of such a building which would be supported by daily usage charges.

Would it be feasible for the city to acquire the Handley property, pave the parts not currently paved, stripe it for parking, put charge machines a la some Cannery Row lots, have our efficient meter maids patrol with their usual enthusiasm, and pay for the property just as they would pay for the Sunset improvement? It would not be likely that as many cars could be accommodated on the Handley land as in a multi-story Sunset lot, but the Sunset property could be left as it is and with the two pieces of land used in a single-level mode, it might be possible to supply parking places for a number of cars equal to that expected from the multi-story building.

What advantages would accrue to such a program?

1. The Handley land would not turn into a massive apartment/condo.
2. The Handley heir will get a return on father's foresighted action.
3. The city won't have to build a massive downtown structure that will add immeasurable traffic clogging to an area already filled with passing tourists and parked delivery trucks most of the day.
4. Workers in the city stores could be encouraged either by gentle persuasion to walk two blocks further to park before work or could be given a financial break on parking costs to encourage such action.
5. Surely the cost of the undeveloped Handley land plus some paving costs would not match or exceed the cost of a massive building as proposed.
6. Hopefully, then, such a plan would be cheaper, less likely to produce added congestion to a crowded area at Eighth and San Carlos, would provide income to Mr. Handley, and would keep unneeded housing from being built.

Is there any thought being given to such a proposal?

Merely a tenant

Dear Editor:

Since the controversy over the R-4 issue in Carmel has begun to heat up, several people have developed the misconception that Hayward Lumber Co. is the developer.

To avoid confusion, I would like it to be known that Hayward Lumber Co. leases that property from its present owner. Hayward is in no way to be associated with any proposals to further develop that property. We are merely a tenant.

Enough is enough

Dear Editor:

Last week I spent considerable time on the steps of the Carmel Post Office...and, it was cold...all week. As a result I have come down with a severa chest cold. However, it was worth it.

In our efforts to get the city of Carmel to prepare an EIR before developing the lumberyard property on Torres and Fourth Avenue. I felt keenly the attitude of so many of the residents who signed the petition, that the prevailing feeling was that, enough was enough, and that they were not going to take it anymore.

I want to thank all the nice people who signed my petition, and I know our Carmel-by-the-Sea Neighborhood Association NE members feel the same. Our parking, acute congestion, people and water problems are acute enough. Let's solve some of these problems first without adding more.

Thank you all. It made getting sick almost worth it.

Carmel deserves EIR

Dear Editor:

The citizens of Carmel deserve an environmental impact report regarding the Hayward Lumber Co. site.

The last thing we need is an apartment complex — the streets are already taxed and noise levels in some neighborhoods are more in keeping with larger cities' levels.

We need to make a very careful and thoughtful plan for this site.

Benefit set for Michelle Clark

A BENEFIT dance-concert for Michelle Clark, the Carmel Valley woman who lost her left leg in an auto accident, has been scheduled for Sept. 9.

The benefit for Clark, a Carmel Pine Cone employee and good friend (she also works for The Cheese Shop in Carmel Plaza), will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 9 at The City Limits nightclub in Salinas, 1370 S. Main St. at the corner of Highway 68 and Blanco Road.

Scheduled to perform at the dance will be rock bands Astonished Man, Floating Mission and Band Without Pity. Cover charge is $5 and proceeds will benefit the Michelle Clark Rehabilitation Fund. The fund was set up to help offset costs of a $40,000 medical bill incurred as a result of the accident; the medical insurance covered only $5,000.

If you'd like to help Michelle get back on her feet, send your contributions to: Michelle Clark Rehabilitation Fund, c/o Carmel Pine Cone PO Box G-1, Carmel 93921. For more information on the fund call 624-0162. For information on the dance-concert call 758-5565.

Surprisingly short meeting

Carmel dentist 'extracts' an office on appeal

By DAVID LELAND

PROBABLY ONE of the most memorable aspects of Tuesday's Carmel City Council meeting was its length — a mere 50 minutes. Mind you, only a few months ago the monthly marathons were inching up to the five-hour mark.

But with many of the city's capital projects either on line or in the design stage — the beach project, senior housing and the library annex — the council is now back to hearing Carmel Planning Commission appeals and second readings of new ordinances.

Even the tourist trade has slackened off at the Carmel Woman's Club, where the council has been gathering for about a year due to the large crowds filling the small city hall chambers.

The most lively exchange of the Sept. 1 meeting pitted a dentist and an attorney over the question: when is a business really a business?

At hand was an appeal of an August planning commission decision denying Dr. Bradford Carl the right to expand his dentist office into an adjacent residential unit.

Carl operates his office at Mission Street and Fourth Avenue in the rear of a single-bedroom home he also owns. That residence is leased by attorney Tom Nash.

Carl had sought to evict Nash and relocate part of his office into the front building, where Nash currently lives and operates his law practice.

But the planning commission said a new commercial use can only be established when a commercial use already exists within that zoning area (R-4).

Carl told the council this week that Nash received a business license in 1984 to practice law at that location as well as live there, so it was already being used as a business.

"I'm not asking you to change anything," Carl said. "I'm asking to use the space the way it is now."

Carl complained that he was tricked into extending Nash's lease into September, but now he wants Nash out of the home so he can use the structure for writing his reports and consultation work. He said he is currently forced to use his laboratory for that purpose.

But Nash told the council that even though he has a desk he uses for his law practice at the house, it is still his principal place of residence.

"What we have here is a residence," said Nash, who has lived at that address for 3½ years. "What Dr. Carl proposes to do is to eliminate that residence."

•

NASH, WHO wrote a last-minute plea to the council stating his case on stationery whose letterhead used the Mission Street address, was firm in his belief that he merely lived at that address.

"I would be willing to give up my use permit to save one more residence for the city," he said. "Historically no one in Carmel has been able to evict a resident and turn it into a business."

But the majority (3-1,with Councilman Jim Wright dissenting and Councilmember Elinor Laiolo absent due to illness), agreed with Carl and overturned the planning commission decision.

"I think that the doctor is entitled to the full use of that home/office as the tenant is," said Councilman Bob Fischer.

Concurring was Councilman Bob Evans. "The doctor has at least as much right to use the one room for an office as Mr. Nash does," he said.

But Wright voted to uphold the planning commission's decision not to allow the dentist to use the house as an office.

"The general plan supports retention of residential uses in the commercial district," he said. "As long as it's being used as a residence the planning commission made the proper decision."

But even though Nash lost in his effort to keep Carl from moving his office into his house, he said he was not giving up just yet.

"Dr. Carl's attempt to evict me must still be decided in court," he said. "The eviction is essentially retaliatory."

Nash said he did not receive the eviction notice until he wrote a letter to the planning commission protesting against a WATS line being installed in his residence.

PINE INN has made an offer to the city at the Sept. 1 city council meeting to contruct a parking garage at an existing lot behind the inn on Sixth Avenue between Lincoln and Monte Verde. The council passed the matter on to the planning commission for review. (Mac McDonald photo.)

Carl told the council that the line was for his video business, UR Unlimited, which produces films featuring cosmetic dentistry and nutrition.

•

IN OTHER action the council:

• Continued until its November meeting an appeal of a planning commission decision denying a use permit for Landell Studios.

• Upheld a planning commission decision denying a hanging sign for the Carmel Camera Center.

The basis for the planning commission's decision, according to Diane White, planning director, is to control the number of signs in the city in an effort to stop "visual clutter."

• Forwarded to the planning commission a proposal from the Pine Inn regarding a possible joint parking facility at Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street.

The Pine Inn is offering to build a one-story structure at its own expense, with plans subject to city approval. That would create two levels of parking on that publicly and privately owned land.

The lower level would be at Monte Verde Street, currently the level of the Pine Inn parking lot, while the upper level would be at the elevation of Lincoln Street.

Under the plan, the Pine Inn would deed the air space rights and the second level to the city. In exchange, the city would deed the subsurface rights and the first level of the parking structure on its property to the Pine Inn.

The planning commission will decide if the recommendation is in conformance with the general plan, zoning ordinances, and whether an environmental impact report is needed.

District adopts 'healthy' budget, but money's tight

By DAVID LELAND

EVEN THOUGH the Carmel Unified School District this week unanimously adopted a "healthy" budget for the 1987-88 school year, it may only be a matter of time before the method used to achieve that goal ceases to be effective.

On the surface, the beginning balance of $10,064,219 looks like it will meet the needs of the district, which is an increase of 5 percent over last year's actual expenditures.

But after the teachers sign another one-year contract, which will be deducted from the budget, and lottery funds are banked instead of being used for special programs, those figures may begin to pale.

CUSD administrators are currently undergoing contract negotiations with the teachers union, which is asking for $280,000 to be added to the salary schedule for the 1987-88 school year, plus benefits.

Last year, the teachers signed a $300,000-plus bargaining agreement with the district that offered beginning teachers $18,500 per year. The top salary a teacher could earn under that agreement was $34,600.

It is unclear what the amount of that contract will be, but just for example, if that number is $280,000 that will be deducted from the district's $404,350 unrestricted fund. That would leave only $124,350 in the CUSD coffers.

That, according to Vance Baldwin, assistant superintendent of schools, is not enough.

"Our reserve should be between 4 percent and 5 percent of the total budget," he said. In other words, at least $400,000.

But what may have the most far-reaching effects on the district is the use of lottery funds for day-to-day expenses.

The district, in an attempt to avoid financial chaos if the state's basic aid program is cut, is banking the current year's lottery allotment and using the previous year's to bolster the budget.

This year, the budget shows an expected $233,149 in lottery revenue and a reserve from last year's lottery funds of $260,000.

Basic aid is contingent upon $120 given to the district per student for daily attendance, which composes $260,000 annually or 2 percent of the school's budget.

CUSD Supt. Bob Infelise said each year state officials threaten to eliminate those funds to schools, so the only way to not be caught by suprise is to plan for that day.

"This gives us a chance to look a year or two down the road," he told the school board. "You can hardly ever do that in a public school."

And while the board members said they were "comfortable" with that decision, it appears that if lottery funds are used exclusively for daily operating expenses some programs could be cut or die out.

"The lottery is not intended for day-to-day operations," Baldwin said. "But we're having to do that to keep the doors open."

As this year begins, the district has already eliminated its teacher development programs and is receiving less transportation reimbursement.

City will crack down on illegal business signs

By NANCY HILLS

IT'S A sign of the times.

Signs, outdoor displays and illegal designs are going to get the once-over from the city of Carmel at the request of the Carmel Planning Commission's Land Use Committee.

"We have instructed staff to begin looking at some of the areas we have personally seen and have been getting complaints about in terms of interior and exterior displays, interior and exterior signs, and windows," Carmel Planning Commission Chairman Ken White said.

The committee took the action after a land use committee met on Aug. 24 and reviewed slides of many current sign and display code violations in the commercial district.

The commission, White said, is "very concerned" about a growing number of illegal displays and business activities in the town.

"We are finding new businesses putting up signs that are not OK'd by the planning commission," White said. "When they (the signs) are finally rounded up and (some) denied they are quite upset."

Signs have one of the greatest visual impacts on the city and very hard to control, White said. Because of that, they can have a devastating effect on Carmel's appearance, he added.

"They send a negative message to visitors to the town," White said.

Individual signs are often the subject of debate among commissioners during the meetings.

All signs must be approved by the planning commission before they become permanent, though there is a provision in the code for a temporary sign, primarily "for sale" or "for rent" information.

In addition to new businesses, existing establishments seem to have been taking liberties with the code.

"We're finding that some businesses are putting up signs not within the sign ordinance or in the character of Carmel," White said.

•

Examples of illegal activity White cited are banner displays, stuffed animals on the street, benches added to the business exteriors, ceramic bears, large "sale" signs in windows which are "there for a long period of time," flashing lights in windows and lighted displays.

Outdoor displays are almost entirely illegal, he said.

White said he hoped that by giving the problem some publicity, businesses will voluntarily cease some of the activities that violate city code.

"It's not in the character of Carmel to allow these types of things to proliferate out of control," he said.

Many of the commissioners have observed illegal activities themselves and have received complaints from citizens.

Planning department calls have switched from primarily residential complaints to complaints about the commercial district, staff members report.

Hearing on R-4 specific plan draws big crowd

consumption if the area is developed and made suggestions that ranged from decreasing the density to statements that Carmel does not need any more residences at all because the town is already overcrowded.

"I hope the planning commission will require an EIR and in the end please do not approve any kind of complex that would damage the R-4 as much as the Carmel Plaza has damaged the commercial district," Linda Anderson said.

Another speaker, Robert Leidig, suggested that more commercial space is not needed in town and increasing the commercial district was against the general plan.

"I have heard many times that it is our desire and intent to maintain a village character. A project of that magnitude does not meet that objective," Leidig said.

He added that he felt it should be "put on the ballot and let residents vote" on the issue. His suggestion drew a round of applause.

Another subject that generated comment was the increased traffic and parking people felt the proposed ordinance and zoning would create.

Many echoed Linda Anderson's comment that additional parking would be needed for tenants' guests and roommates.

Some said that the city should purchase the property, which is the largest single piece of developable land in Carmel.

Handley offered the to sell the 53,900-square-foot site to the city for $3 million last March, but the city council rejected the offer.

At the time, the city was considering using the property for a parking lot.

During the council's closed session Sept. 1, the council decided once again to look into purchasing the property. The same committee consisting of Eastwood and Wright will conduct the investigation.

"We're just talking about it and trying to establish the property value," Eastwood said. "My feeling always is if the community is dying to have it, we should get it for them."

The council must weigh what use or benefit it would have for the city, Eastwood added.

"People are always suggesting what we should own and buy," he said. "When people come up with alternative uses, that's being realistic."

A park is a possibility, Eastwood said.

There is, however, a "certain mentality that says we should buy it and do nothing with it," he added.

•

ATTORNEYS AND representatives of two principal property owners, Tom Handley and Bob Murphy, countered the public comments by stating that open space requirements, building site coverage restrictions and other design features built into the plan would minimize the visual impact of any development.

Also, the developers maintain that a greater density, in conjunction with the other requirements, would encourage smaller, more affordable units and reduce the building mass.

"This is damn near identical to the senior citizen housing (on the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue)," Carmel contractor Alan Williams said.

That 24-unit project in the R-1 zone was approved with a density of 52 units per acre.

Williams, who recently served on the General Plan Review Committee and represented the city during hearings on water allocation at the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District meetings, has been representing the Hayward Lumber Co. site owner, Tom Handley, in the city's R-4 discussions for years.

Spokesman for both Handley and the lower lumberyard owner, Robert Murphy, requested the 66 units per acre during planning commission workshops on the R-4 district, claiming the owners need that density to make development economically feasible.

Both proponents and opponents of the zoning ordinance and specific plan were asked to sign a list if they wished to address the planning commission, and the roster quickly grew to two pages of names.

The fire department-enforced limit of 125 seats was filled even before the meeting began, and latecomers gathered at open doors and leaned through the window to listen to the comments.

Many Carmel citizens who signed the list asking to speak waived their opportunity after others stated the same feelings and concerns.

The crowd was gathered to hear a presentation on a zoning ordinance which, when approved, will set the density for the R-4 district and review of a specific plan which regulates height restrictions, permitted commercial uses, open space requirements, viewshed protections, site coverage, parking requirements and suggested street improvements.

The plan is the latest version of one the city and developers have been working on for the past two years, though R-4 zoning has been bouncing around since 1978.

Density numbers have ranged from 66 units per acre to 20 units per acre over the past nine years.

When the city was rezoned in 1984, the R-4 district density was changed to 33 units per acre from the level set in 1978 of 66 units per acre.

The 33 units per acre density would permit 40 units on the Hayward Lumber Co. site if there is no density bonus and no commercial space.

The purpose of the R-4 zone was to provide a buffer and transition between the commercial district and the residential district at Third Avenue and Torres Street.

In 1985, the city hired Community Planning Consultants firm to develop a plan for the area. That plan suggested 20 units per acre with 24 units per acre if it qualifies for the density bonus by constructing a percentage of affordable housing.

In approximately 18 meetings between the planning commission and property owner's representatives since June 1985, when CPC's plan was reviewed, the proposed denisty increased from 20 to the current 66/33 units per acre level.

Panetta heads up effort to defend state's coast

RESPONDING to published reports that the U.S. Commerce Department might withdraw its approval of California's coastal management program, Rep. Leon E. Panetta, along with Sens. Alan Cranston and Pete Wilson and 23 other members of Congress, wrote to acting Commerce Secretary Clarence J. Brown to urge that the department maintain its support for the state program.

'The Coastal Zone Management Act creates an important, but delicate, partnership between the states and the federal government,' Panetta said. 'Any effort by the department to withdraw approval of the California coastal management plan would destroy the trust which, to date, has made that partnership a success.'

They also cautioned the department not to withhold the state's 1987 grant for administering the program or attempt to force the state to agree to "unnecessary and unjustified conditions" on that grant, a statement released by Panetta's office said.

They said that any such action "would be unwarranted as a matter of both law and policy," and that they would "respond with quick and decisive legislative action" if the department were to take any such steps.

"The Coastal Zone Management Act creates an important, but delicate, partnership between the states and the federal government," the congressman wrote. "Any effort by the department to withdraw approval of the California coastal management plan would destroy the trust which, to date, has made that partnership a success."

The department is conducting a periodic review of the plan, which has been approved routinely by the department several times since the plan's creation in 1978 under the Coastal Zone Management Act (CZMA).

In May, Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel urged the Commerce Department to consider moving against California's coastal plan, accusing the California Coastal Commission, which administers the state plan, of "usurping power" and calling the commission a threat to "America's form of government" and "individual freedom and property rights."

Under the CZMA, coastal states receive financial support from the federal government to help implement plans for management of the three-mile wide state coastal zone. The plans must be approved by the Commerce Department in order to obtain funding.

The same law requires that federal offshore initiatives which have an effect on the three-mile coastal zone, such as offshore oil and gas drilling, be consistent with federally approved management plans. Panetta has introduced legislation to clarify that this requirement applies to activities which take place outside of that zone as well as those which occur inside the three-mile limit.

In their letter, Panetta and the other members asserted that the California Coastal Commission has fully abided by the law and by its previously approved management program.

"There is no question that California has operated within the requirements of the Coastal Zone Management Act," they wrote. "It has also abided by the terms of its coastal management plan and the grants which it has received from the Department. It has conducted a balanced program which has permitted environmental protection and economic development to co-exist."

They added, "The (Coastal) Commission's balanced approach has been particularly successful with respect to offshore oil development...The commission's practices have...lowered conflicts over energy development, and have permitted both energy production and environmental protection...Since federal approval of the coastal plan...the overwhelming majority of proposed OCS exploration plans and proposed OCS development and production plans submitted to the commission have been approved."

Ruling on Clintville could close its doors

CLINTVILLE MAY be Closedville soon, depending upon a ruling the city of Carmel is awaiting from Monterey Superior Court Judge Richard Silver.

The city filed a request for a preliminary injunction Aug. 21 to prohibit the continuing operation of the business based on zoning and building code violations.

Silver took the matter "under advisement" and could make a ruling at any time.

Paul Laub owns the building and the business, which has received nationwide attention, including on the Today Show and the Tonight Show, due to its Eastwood paraphernalia and most recently, Pope John Paul II souvenirs.

The injunction could close down the business prior to Oct. 5 when the city and Laub are scheduled to meet in court concerning alleged business license and zoning violations in the Paradise Building on the corner of Dolores Street and Ocean Avenue. The city filed the lawsuit last September.

The request for a preliminary injunction was filed because in late June the city discovered what it alleges are fire and building code violations in the basement where Clintville store is located and the city was concerned that the owner Laub and his attorney, Hugo Gerstl, would try to delay the trial, Carmel special counsel Michael Stamp explained.

"There are number of things the judge could do and it's really hard to guess what will happen," Stamp said.

The strictest ruling in favor of the city would shut down all operations other than storage in the basement. However, because the injunction was heard so close to the trial date, Silver may choose to wait and make a decision then.

"The city's wacko, and you can quote me," was Gerstl's response to The Carmel Pine Cone's questions about the ~~in~~junction.

Gerstl felt it was improper for the city to file for the injuction so close to the trial date and that the basement is operated the same way it has been for many years.

Laub said he has filed for "sanctions" against the city, asking for financial compensation for the city's "perfidious actions."

Requests for sanctions are filed when a litigant feels the law and the use of the court have been abused.

Walkway construction may begin by year's end

By DAVID LELAND

AFTER HEARING suggestions from the beach task force, architects working on Phase II of the Carmel Beach Restoration Project are ready to begin design of the final drawings — construction could begin by year's end.

But for those involved with the renovation of the coastline, which was devastated by storms in both 1981-82 and 1983-84, a cautious optimism prevails.

"I would hope to have it (construction) underway by November," said Greg D'Ambrosio, directer of administrative services for the city. "But I said that two years ago."

Included in the $750,000 beach project will be a decomposed granite blufftop walkway beginning at Eighth Avenue to the city's southern limits, reconstruction of five stairways, new handicapped curbside ramps, benches and scenic overlooks along the walkway.

During the past year, the beach restoration has been the subject of numerous Carmel City Council meetings, surveys and a town hall gathering, in an attempt to gather public sentiment.

Almost three-fourths of the residents involved in the discussions have expressed belief that the the project will not only shore up the eroding cliffs, but will provide a safer place for people to walk and admire the ocean.

"This plan really resulted in an attempt to look at the problems along the coastline," said David Shonman, a coastal biologist involved in the beach project for the past four years. "For residents, the beach experience is walking along the cliffs of Carmel Beach."

Shonman said some of the areas incorporated into the current plan have been concerns for more than 10 years. These include, beach access, traffic and parking on Scenic Road and a sufficient safe area for walkers.

At last week's workshop meeting of the beach task force, members reviewed demolition, landscape and structural plans and made recommendations to architects Royston, Hanamoto, Alley and Abey.

While the meeting was open to the public, there was no action required by the three members present, according to Jean Grace, beach task force member.

During the meeting, task force members viewed the plans and wrote their suggestions on yellow sheets of paper and tacked them to the plan. A total of about 25 recommendations were tallied, Grace said.

None of these dealt with the actual layout of the path, she said. Instead, the concerns centered on problems such as placement of boulders used to shore up the cliff and aesthetic concerns.

D'Ambrosio said the task force will continue to work with the city throughout the "four to five months" the beach restoration is under construction.

•

THE NEXT step in readying the project for groundbreaking will be for the council, Coastal Commission and Coastal Conservancy to review the final plans.

And, while the majority of residents are pleased with the way the task force and architects have revised their plans to come up with a workable solution, at least one citizen is still concerned that the project does not fit the image of Carmel.

"It (the bluffs) should be left in its natural state and planted," said Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo, who has rallied for support against any changes on Scenic Road. "I'm still very concerned about safety."

Laiolo said that once that road is narrowed to accomodate a pathway, emergency vehicles will not be able to maneuver through traffic on busy days.

But Capt. Don Fuselier of the Carmel Police Department said that the 20-foot width will be sufficient to allow safe passage.

Laiolo also expressed concern over the loss of parking places needed to construct the pathway. Currently there are 142 parking spaces, but after Phase II is adapted there will only be 104 slots.

But Shonman believes the task force and architects have done the best job possible in arranging the layout.

"There's no way one plan can satisfy everybody," he said. "The task force has made a lot of compromises. The task force has done the best job possible to make as many people happy as can be."

At one point in the process, he said, the task force had recommended a plan with a design showing less than 70 parking spaces, but it changed those drawings after bowing to public sentiment for more.

One idea which is sure to please everybody with the new plan is the decision to use the unpotable water from the city's underground spring in the Del Mar reserve tank.

That water, D'Ambrosio said, would be dumped into the ocean if it were not being used for irrigation.

And even though there will be considerable water needed to start the plants' growth, eventually the vegetation will demand less water, Grace said.

She added that the plants picked for the project are native and drought-resistant plants, which use very little water.

•

ONE OF the principal objectives of the task force has been to pay attention to residents' fears that the walkway area would resemble a park.

D'Ambrosio believes that goal has been achieved with the "informal, meandering pathway" pictured in the drawings.

There are no lights, there will be less signposts then there are now, and the signs there will be supported by wooden poles instead of the metal ones currently in play.

"I think that in some cases people will wonder what we did," D'Ambrosio said. "The most obvious change is the narrowness of the road and the pathway."

The Coastal Conservancy, which granted $200,000 toward construction of the walkway last March, has been gracious in its demands, D'Ambrosio said.

Originally, the state agency had requested the city to post ample signing in Carmel directing traffic toward Scenic Road, but that has been discarded.

"They are not only one of the easiest, but one of the best governmental agencies I've ever worked with," Ambrosio said.

SAFETY HAS been one of the primary considerations in planning for the Carmel Beach walkway. This artist's rendition of the path along Scenic Road may soon be realized, with Phase II of the Carmel Beach Restoration Project inching into its final drawing stages. The $750,000 project has been the subject of much controversy during the past year, but last week the beach task force paved the way for architects to begin final design, with construction slated to begin as early as November.

Carmel Middle School acquires a real winner

By DAVID LELAND

BEFORE THE first day of school had even begun, the new assistant principal at Carmel Middle School had become a familiar face to many students, parents and fellow administrators.

Last week, Rosemary Pinnick's smiling face was seen winning $32,000 in prizes on the top-rated game show Wheel of Fortune.

Pinnick is replacing former vice principal Dee Dresser, who is working at the American School in Madrid as a counselor and administrator.

"I'm a very strict disciplinarian," says the confident Pinnick. "I can discipline with a smile."

Even though Pinnick is new to the district, she is not new to meting out discipline, having worked for the past year as an administrative intern at Washington Junior High School in Salinas, where she kept lord over 1,200 students.

"She had done all of the disciplinarian things in a much larger school," explains Karl Pallastrini, who adds that Pinnick was chosen over more than 100 applicants.

Before working as an administrative intern, she taught math and physical education at that school.

She also taught math for four years at La Vista High School in Hayward.

Besides her task as disciplinarian, Pinnick will also take charge of student government. Last year that task fell to counselor Donna Alonzo.

Pinnick says that she will provide "silly-type" activities during the lunch hour for the youngsters in order to promote a healthy atmosphere.

Those will include grade-level competition, sack races and rallies.

Pinnick recently received her masters in educational administration at the United States International University in San Diego.

Pinnick and her husband, Timothy, a computer programmer for the county, live in Marina.

FRESH FROM her winnings as a contestant on Wheel of Fortune, Rosemary Pinnick will take over this year as new assistant principal at Carmel Middle School. (David Leland photo.)

Middle school years could be make-or-break years

FOR MOST 11- or 12-year-old youngsters their first days at middle school are every bit as memorable (and scary) as those days — half a lifetime ago — when they walked into kindergarten.

"It's altogether as momentous an event," says Samuel G. Sava, executive director of the National Association of Elementary School Principals, who thinks parents may overlook the seriousness of this transition from elementary school.

"I believe the middle school years — from age 11 through 14 — really can be make-or-break years for a child's academic and personal success later on," Sava said.

Acknowledging the confusion adolescence brings to youngsters and parents, he offers the following advice for parents to help children maneuver that giant step away from the security of the elementary into the uncertainty of middle school.

• Get to know the school. Visit the school within the first few weeks. Meet the principals and teachers. Learn school policies. Then, if your child comes home with a problem, you'll know the rules and the person to call.

• Be ready to adjust to dramatic changes in your child. Adolescent children seek independence, which often means challenging parental and school authority. Being acquainted with the school staff may help parents weather some future storms.

• Be prepared for a lot less information. That elementary school child, who told you all about school, is almost gone. Along with child's move toward independence is a natural inclination not to share information about school — good or bad.

• Keep monitoring schoolwork and grades. Be subtle, not too inquisitive. Keep an eye out for stumbling blocks particularly in subjects new to your child, like computer lab, algebra, biology, home economics, typing, and industrial arts.

• Watch for extreme swings in grades — up and down. If a child's grade record remains similar to that of elementary school, OK. But if grades are abnormally low or high, it's time to check with the teacher. Extremely high grades may indicate incorrect placement. Give children about six weeks to adjust, though, before becoming too concerned.

• Encourage extracurricular activities, but watch for overload. Participating in sports and clubs is almost indispensable to the adolescent's self-esteem, but academic performance must dictate the number of activities a child can handle.

• Relax. Let the kids win some skirmishes. Save your ammunition for the key battles. Don't go to war over appropriate dress, for instance. Check for the school's decency standards, and let your child be independent within those guidelines.

• Meet your child's new friends and their parents. Welcome your child's widening circle of friends personally — no matter how difficult. Before a youngster visits a new friend, call, introduce yourself to the family, and confirm the plans. Prying? Maybe, but research shows that children actually do appreciate parents' interest — they just don't say so. In fact, their objections tend to be quite dramatic. Hold your ground.

• Attend school functions and sporting events. Don't assume your relationship with school ends with elementary school graduation. Keep up with all of your child's activities, teammates, teachers, and principals. Don't start missing the swim meets, choir performances, or the PTA meetings.

"The major difficulty children have when they reach middle school is with responsibility," says Sava. "Adjusting to more than one teacher, juggling multiple subjects, changing classrooms all day, budgeting time wisely, making and keeping new friends, staying organized — that's quite an agenda, and youngsters need their parents' help in managing it."

(The National Association of Elementary School Principals is a professional organization serving 25,000 elementary and middle school educators nationwide.)

Parking solution

CARMEL BUSINESSMAN Paul Laub claims he has a solution to the parking problem in Carmel — at least for himself. He merely parks his car (license: "Le Laub") in a 20-minute zone for as long as he wants, takes the ticket and pays the $10 fee. "It's a means of paying the city 'rent' for otherwise hard-to-find long-term parking in the city of Carmel," says Laub, not one to do things in an ordinary manner or call attention to himself. The car, by the way, is a Bentley. (Chuck Scardina photo.)

Dam should be seen as a total package says incumbent

By NANCY HILLS

FOR PATRICIA Bernardi, the proposed New San Clemete Dam project should be looked at as a "total package" and not just "a dam on the Carmel River."

Bernardi is one of two incumbents (along with chairman Dick Heuer) running for a seat on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board; the election is set for Nov. 3. She was first elected in 1983.

Her ballot statement, Bernardi feels, sums up the items she considers the important parts of a complete project. It lists "most importantly, drought protection for the residents" in addition to provisions for water conservation, environmental restoration for the Carmel River, improved fishery and maintenance of the steelhead wild run, a water management scheme that integrates ground water and surface water and phased release of the additional water the dam will provide.

Though the water board "takes a great deal of time and energy," Bernardi said she decided to run again because "things are still in process and it's a bad time to drop out.

"Also, until the bond election (on the dam), there are things that can be changed in the project" that will affect how water is used on the peninsula, Bernardi said, refering to her ballot statement description of the project.

"The other thing is I know how hard it is to get up to snuff on the issues," she added.

Bernardi said she had certain goals she wished to complete when she got on the board. Some are near completion, some have been accomplished, and some still have a ways to go.

Tops on her list is completion of the environmental impact report/statement on the proposed dam on the Carmel River. A draft of the EIR/EIS for public comment will be released by the water management district this September and a certified document should be ready next spring.

"I want to present as much information to the public, to give a document to them that covers all their questions," Bernardi said.

As a board member, Bernardi has also been interested in and worked on getting a water reclamation plant in the district. The plan which is now under discussion would be located at Carmel Sanitary District facility and provide about 800 acre feet of reclaimed water for the peninsula.

Water conservation is another issue that Bernardi said was something she wanted to see implemented. The board approved a conservation ordinance this year which requires low flow fixtures in new construction and when a property is sold.

Also, a conservation kit distribution program is on the agenda for the Sept. 14 board meeting.

Prior to her election to the district board in 1983, Bernardi was a member of the Carmel River Watch program and has been a "lifelong resident of Monterey County." She lived in the city of Monterey for eight years and for the past 13 and a half she has resided in Carmel Valley.

"I consider myself a resident of the peninsula," Bernardi said in response to the complaints there are too many people on the board from Carmel Valley.

Additionally, Carmel Valley is subject to the greatest impact from water use on the peninsula because about 80 percent of the water supply comes from the Carmel River and aquifer, she said.

"I think it's hard to live here (on the peninsula) and not be worried about the environment," Bernardi said.

To people who criticize the board's performance, Bernardi said she will stand on her record.

"Anybody who has followed this board knows we probably have put in more time gratuitously than any other board or agency around here. As for the EIR/EIS, we have moved about as fast as our budget allows," she said.

APPEAL TO THE UNITED STATES SENATE

Reject the Nomination of Robert H. Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court

We oppose Robert Bork because:

What is at stake in the nomination of Robert H. Bork is not just one seat on the Supreme Court, but decades of progress in the area of constitutional liberties. Bork would shift the balance of the Court, creating a new majority capable of reversing landmark decisions which have brought us closer to the goal of "liberty and justice for all."

• ACCESS TO COURTS
He has sought to limit the Court's role in protecting individual rights, and shut the courthouse door to people seeking relief from governmental abuse.

• PRIVACY AND REPRODUCTIVE RIGHTS
He has rejected the principle of the constitutional right to privacy and would permit the government to intrude on private aspects of our lives, including family planning and access to safe and legal abortions.

• FIRST AMENDMENT
He holds a very limited view of the First Amendment separation of church and state, and of its guarantees of free speech.

• CIVIL RIGHTS — EQUAL PROTECTION
He has objected to portions of the Civil Rights Act, the principle of "one person, one vote," and the Court decision striking down the poll tax; he has sought to severely limit the application of the "equal protection" clause of the 14th Amendment.

• ROLE IN WATERGATE
Robert Bork carried out Richard Nixon's orders to fire Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox, after Elliot Richardson, the Attorney General, and William Ruckelshaus, his Deputy, both resigned rather than be a party to the White House cover-up.

Today, we face a still deeper constitutional crisis, in which the actions of the White House and Executive Branch raise serious questions. The role of the Independent Counsel is being challenged and may go to the Supreme Court. How would Bork respond?

I am convinced... that Roe v. Wade is an unconstitutional decision....
— Robert H. Bork, 6/1/1981, Senate testimony

THE SENATE RESPONSIBILITY IS CO-EQUAL WITH THE PRESIDENT'S

The Senate has an independent constitutional responsibility, co-equal to that of the President, in the selection of Supreme Court Justices to insure the independence and balance of the Court, and to prevent ideological court packing. Historically, one in five Supreme Court nominees has been rejected by the Senate. As early as 1795, the Senate rejected President Washington's nominee, John Rutledge. Three of the negative votes were cast by signers of the Constitution.

DON'T LET PRESIDENT REAGAN & ATT'Y GENERAL MEESE UNBALANCE THE SUPREME COURT!

THE REV. Lamont Wiltsee gives Robert Louis Stevenson's "Coach" Wilson a brotherly hug outside the new "Church in the Forest," which will hold its first service Sept. 13. (Holly McFarland photo.)

New 'Church in the Forest' will be a people's church

By DAVID LELAND

THE REV. Lamont Wiltsee offers up quite a vision for his new, community-oriented "Church in the Forest" at Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach.

Wiltsee sees the congregation as transcending his Episcopalian teachings. Instead, it will provide a meeting place for anyone who wants to become closer to the Lord.

"We're doing a new thing," says Wiltsee, 40, gesturing toward the award-winning chapel. "It is God working through a secular institution to missionize Pebble Beach."

The "new thing" Wiltsee talks about is the combining of a school's student body, faculty and nearby residents to make the church successful.

"I want this to be the people's church," says the graduate of Claremont School of Theology. "I want to push the 'doing' of the church onto the people that come here."

That theme will start with the RLS faculty and students who will compose the choir, under the direction of Kathryn Yant.

Wiltsee will offer two services each Sunday. A 9:30 a.m. preaching service will be offered each week except the first Sunday of the month, when Holy Communion is given. The 5:30 p.m. service will offer Holy Communion each week, except for the first Sunday of the month.

The first service will be given Sept. 13, with the verse being about "the four themes of God" — service, wonder, love and praise.

For Wiltsee, who comes to RLS as the former chaplain of the Cathedral School in San Francisco, the idea of having his own setting is a dream come true, and further demonstrates the four themes he will discuss at his initial service.

"Service is the highest activity that we have as human beings," he says. "This church will exist to serve God and the world."

Wiltsee knows how hard it can be to actually start a church from the ground up; he did so as founding vicar of St. Andrews in Irvine.

"It's so much easier to start a church when you have a building," says Wiltsee, in his resonant voice.

Set among a grove of tall trees, the "Church in the Forest," also known as the Eleanor Donnelly Erdman Memorial Chapel, was donated to RLS in 1964 by C. Pardee Erdman.

•

LONG USED for weddings, memorial services and Sunday morning Holy Communion for about a dozen RLS students, this Sept. 13 will mark the first time the outside public has been invited to share the worship experience.

The designers of the chapel took great pains to insure that the structure would blend into its surroundings.

With its lattice trim along the floor-to-ceiling windows, side entry aisle into the pews and beautiful backdrop of the Margery Pyle Messelt Memorial Garden, the chapel was honored by the American Institute of Architects for its design in 1965.

"As you can see, it's spectacular," says a proud Wiltsee, as he stands on the pulpit facing the shiny wooden pews which can seat 250 people. "You don't even need a stained-glass window."

State may experience worst fire season in its history

THERE'S NOTHING more heartbreaking than to see people rummaging through what was a home looking for the remnants of their past," says Jerry Partain, director of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection (CDF).

"What's a handful of dollars to make your home fire safe when compared to that kind of loss?" he asks.

One of the main messages of CDF's new "Fire Safe, California!" campaign is that history repeats itself. There is hardly any area in California that has not "burned" at one time or another. The risk to property and people has escalated with the influx of homes into foothills and mountains--and this summer, warns CDF, conditions are ripe for what could be the worst "fire season" in the state's history.

"We've already lost 31 homes in the relatively small Pebble Beach fire," Partain says. "We're urging people to act immediately to avoid becoming victims of fires that can happen at anytime."

The greatest fire risk, according to CDF, is to homes with wood shake roofs. Most of the 31 homes lost in Pebble Beach had shake roofs and burned from the roof down. Owners of any type of home, however, can greatly reduce the risk to their property by:

• Not building a new home or re-roofing a house with wood shake shingles. Treat wood shingle roofs with fire retardants on a regular basis.

• Maintaining a "defensible" space around the home. Clear all flammable vegetation within 30 feet of the structure; clear away dead leaves and needles; and reduce the number of small trees and remove all brush to leave widely spaced trees.

• Cleaning all needles and leaves from the roof, eaves and rain gutters; trimming tree limbs within 10 feet of chimneys; and trimming all dead limbs hanging over the house or garage.

• Covering chimney outlets or vents with a vertical spark arrester of 1/2" mesh screen.

• Ensuring that the entire landscape is well-pruned and watered, using low-growing and less-flammable plants when landscaping, and planting larger trees at least six feet from the house.

• Maintaining a minimum water storage supply of 2,500 gallons for use in emergency situations.

The greatest risk to human life, according to CDF, is poor access or escape routes to and from homes on roads that often barely allow passage of two cars, much less emergency vehicles. Fire can sweep through many areas in just minutes — trapping those who haven't escaped. Homeowners can minimize this risk by:

• Planning for and practicing rapid evacuation. This includes identifying two escape routes from the property.

• Ensuring adequate firefighter access to the home and property, properly identifying the home with clearly visible address marker(s) and making sure that neighborhood and street signs are also easy for firefighters to locate and read.

CDF, a department of the Resources Agency of California, protects California resources and encourages sound land management of the state's forest, brush and grass-covered lands. CDF is the nationwide leader in fire prevention practices and wildland management.

For further information about CDF and fire safe practices, contact your local fire prevention officer.

DOLLARS & SENSE

By Anthony Piazza & Marshall Bloom

Small supply, big demand

Dear Wise Guys:

Okay, I've listened to all your so-called explanations about why people should invest in one thing or another but I remain totally unimpressed. You peddle just too much baloney as far as this old passbook saver is concerned.

What really gripes me the most, however, is the way you continually brag about how right you've been to believe in this bunch-of-bull market. Just wait till the crash comes, then we'll see how smart you are.

Unconvincedly yours,
Alvin J. Gloomball

Dear Mr. Gloomball:

We're recommending that your house become a tourist attraction, a stop on those tours that also visit the butterfly trees, Fisherman's Wharf and the Carmel Mission.

"Here," the tour guide would explain, "lives the only man on the Monterey Peninsula whose perversity has caused his brain to turn into a species of iceplant."

But you very well could be correct. For all we know, the market could collapse today or tomorrow. We've never touted ourselves as seers.

What we've tried to stress are the salient facts about this market, pieces of information that reveal something about the nature of this particular era in stock market history.

Let's examine again a phenomenon that may seem odd at first: namely, the fact that the existing supply of stock has actually shrunk in the past decade or two, thereby making the remaining supply more valuable.

Every time you hear about something called a leveraged buy-out you're encountering the removal of stock from the marketplace. A leveraged buy-out means generally that insiders in a company buy in all the stock in order to own the company all by themselves. (How they get the money to do this is another issue.)

Also, every time you hear about a merger or a takeover, you're running across another method by which stock is generally taken off the market.

And how about all those companies that have been buying back their own stock all through this bull market for the past five years? As the man said, do you think those companies are buying in their own stock in order to sell it at a loss when the market collapses? Do you think all those executives at all those companies are befuddled about the prospects of the companies they've helped to build and maintain? Do you think they have no sense at all about the relative value of buying in the company stock versus leaving the money to grow at interest?

We're not contending that a decreased supply of stock is a good enough reason for the stock market to continue to rise. The demand for stock must stay as healthy as the diminishing supply. When people perceive that there are more attractive alternatives to good stocks, they'll go after them and leave the market.

Our guess is that you won't notice that change. Worse than a stock market crash, where everyone gets smart real fast, would be a drift downward that takes a long time to become obvious to one and all. Even you might be able to figure that one out.

Sincerely,
Bloom & Piaza

Meals on Wheels needs volunteers

DRIVERS AND other volunteers are needed to deliver 200 meals daily to shut-ins and the handicapped on the peninsula for Meals on Wheels.

According to Chuck Poland, a Carmel volunteer, 200 homes are served with three meals five days a week from Carmel Valley to Marina, but 22 volunteer drivers are needed daily to deliver those meals.

"We were seven drivers short the other day," said Poland, who has been pressed into service so often that he's driving almost daily now. "It means a lot to these people. You thank your lucky stars when you leave."

Poland said there are 22 routes, three of them in the Carmel area. One route usually takes from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. (including driving to and from the pick-up point in New Monterey).

Each shut-in is delivered a breakfast, one cold meal (usually sandwich, salad and juice), and one hot meal. He added that volunteers are also needed to make sandwiches and salads at the Meals On Wheels kitchen in New Monterey.

Amost all of the help is from volunteers, Poland said, so often the agency ends up shorthanded. If you would like to volunteer to help out contact Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

Meals on Wheels is a non-profit organization now in its 15th year.

Birth mothers group meets every month

A BIRTH mothers support group meets once a month at the Childrens Services Center in Monterey.

Birth mothers are women who have given their children up for adoption; the group allows these women to share their feelings with others, according to Terri Livingston, who has been a member of the year-old group.

"There are a lot of women out there...and there's a lot of pain involved," she said. "This gives them a chance to talk about it. We're not a search group, but we have information on it."

The support group meets at 7 p.m. on the last Wednesday of each month at the center at 484 Lighthouse in New Monterey. More information can be obtained by calling either Carol Bishop or Gayle Ward at Childrens Services Center of Monterey County, 649-3033.

Church in the Forest to open

Indeed. The memorial garden, with its small pond, trees and chirping birds presents a perfectly pastoral scene.

Since formalizing his contract with RLS on July 1, Wiltsee has spent the past two months organizing little details that somehow turn into big details.

Take, for example, getting a phone installed in his tiny office, located directly adjacent to the pulpit.

No lines could be strung into the building due to aesthetic considerations, so it took workers three days to tunnel into the building.

"One of the reasons I'm supposed to be doing this is that the doors were opened as I got to them," he says, citing the built-in choir that will be serenading the congregation.

Perhaps the principal message Wiltsee will be able to offer his congregation as it grows throughout the coming years is his credo of love.

"Love is the fundamental message of the Christian gospel," he explains. "Love is praise and praise is worship. Worship is the single most important way we are going to form the character of this church."

FOREST HILL PARK ACCEPTED BY CITY

Carmel formally became the owner of the new Forest Hill park with the council's adoption Monday evening of a resolution accepting five lots from Caroline Benson Unander, former owner of the property. On the city's promise to remit delinquent taxes on lots one, three, five, seven and nine, Block 12, Mrs. Unander, owner of Forest Hill school, agreed several months ago to give this property to the city. The lots are on the side of a canyon, and lots two, four, six, eight and ten dip down from the other side to meets them. For $450 the city purchased the second block of lots and so the city has a small piece of canyon woodland which will be preserved as a natural, rustic park. Junipero, First and Mission bound the area.

EDITOR'S WINDOW

Every Carmelite should spend at least a week in a summer resort, if for no other reason than to convince himself that Carmel is no longer such a place.

It was, once upon a time, perhaps until as late as 1940. But all of that has changed. We are now uneasily dedicated to the proposition that we are a residential community, whatever that is. An it's a convention which is pretty hard to square with our lively artistic heritage. As a matter of fact, it is totally unconvincing when examined against the glaring contradiction of the curious, persistent and prolific tourist in our midst. This latter misfortune which may yet be our undoing.

MEETING IN VALLEY ON FLOOD PROBLEMS

A public meeting to discuss the potential flooding problem is scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 7 at 7:30 p.m. at Tularcitos School in Carmel Valley.

Coordinating flood-disaster plans is Bill Tibbetts, senior administrative analyst for Monterey County.

State and county officials and interested citizens met last week for the first time; the group met again in Big Sur on Aug. 31.

Tibbetts said it is hoped preventive measures can be initiated to reduce damage from probable flooding of the Big Sur and Arroyo Seco rivers. He pointed out that the second course of action will involve general flood emergency plans, with specific details to be worked out for flood warnings, evacuation, refugee care and health measures.

CV RANCH ASSURED ALL WATER IT MAY NEED

Carmel Valley Ranch will get 38.5 percent of the water available for development in Carmel Valley, under an allocation formula adopted by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

The scheme approved Aug. 24 gives first priority for allocation of 6,501 acre feet of water per year in unincorporated areas of the Monterey Peninsula to already-approved existing residential lots.

Carmel Valley has been allocated 287.55 acre feet of water per year, just enough for the approved but undeveloped 832 residential lots. Carmel Valley Ranch — which has approval for a total of 400 units — has reserved enough water for its remaining 320 residential lots.

Neighborhood group to meet Sept. 8

A MEETING OF the Carmel-by-the-Sea Neighbors Association NE will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 8 at Cherry Hall.

Vice President Stephen Poohar will outline the progress his committee has made on informing the Carmel Planning Commission of the association's opposition to the apartment/commercial complex proposed for the R-4 zone.

CONSCIENCE OF CARMEL

By Gunnar Norberg

Is Carmel in danger?

CAN IT be that California's famed Carmel-by-the-Sea, long adored and admired as their special haven by discerning people the world over, is now suddenly in mortal danger? Born brilliantly at the turn of the century, is it now so soon doomed to die?

Or is it going to face a fate even worse than death? But isn't death the final end of every living thing? Yes, but in this instance, that isn't the right answer.

There is a drastic change that doesn't kill—as when a larva turns into a butterfly. And that specific change certainly can be enchanting. But if such a metamorphosis were instead to turn something fine and wonderful into something coarse and gross and hideous, and if then that monstrosity started to grow by fantastic leaps and bounds, the watching world too late could only weep in helpless anguish.

The grim scenario I see emerging here now could all too soon transform Carmel from the miracle community which knowledgeable people everywhere have so long hallowed, into just one more meaningless mushrooming tourist trap.

Today the people of Carmel (the fewer than 5,000 whose homes are inside the city) are stirring wide-eyed, and more and more of them as they make their way to the post office through the ever-increasing crowds, are angry.

And when these suffering Carmelites look up the steep Ocean Avenue hill, they angrily deplore the bumper-to-bumper traffic coming into Carmel during business hours, or going out of Carmel when the work-day ends. Meanwhile larger and larger tour buses shoulder their way into the city, while ever bigger and bigger trucks clutter up all the downtown streets.

This is happening even though Carmel's 1929 credo still stands at the head of all the city's planning and zoning laws, and is printed out in large letters in the city hall. And this is what that 1929 credo still says: "Carmel is essentially, predominantly, and primarily a residential city in which business and commerce have, are now, and are proposed to be in the future subordinated to its residential character."

HOW THEN, you might well ask, could the vast and growing over-commercialization possibly be taking place? The answer is that that credo's purpose and intent is intentionally ignored. Why? Because the city council seems to have been mesmerized by the foolish pseudo-wisdom conveyed to it by a consultant firm (Denise Duffy Associates) which expressed this astonishing view of Carmel's grander (?) future: "...the business district that once served the needs of the local community now has a service area of a much larger scope, namely THE VISITOR POPULATION FREQUENTING CARMEL." (The italics and the capital letters are, of course, mine.)

As more and more residents become furious, they coalesce into angry groups. One of them, the Carmel-by-the-Sea Neighbors Association N.E., recently collected some 1,300 signatures in just a few days' time, simply to make the modest demand that an environmental impact report be prepared before any futher action would be taken on a large high-density development proposal for the Hayward Lumber Co. property at the north end of the city in what's called the R-4 zone.

The association, headed by Clayton Anderson, rightly felt that "the proposed criteria for the R-4 zone could allow a monstrous 103-unit apartment complex and create 11,250 square feet of commercial development."

When the Carmel Planning Commission had heard some three hours of heated testimony against this wild-eyed, out-of-scale proposal it took no definitive action, but instead simply continued the public hearing to Sept. 23.

The Clayton Anderson who heads the association, is the same Clayton Anderson who—along with Philip Foss—has long urged federal environmental authorities to remove the menace to all the Carmel-related areas which a still looming and still frightening Hatton Canyon Freeway certainly would be.

And it is these Anderson-Foss efforts which are having the effect of keeping Caltrans in San Luis Obispo and in Sacramento, along with the federal Highway Administration both in California and in Washington, very busy preparing what they consider simply time-consuming work.

When I talked on the phone with Caltrans freeway planner Gary Ruggerone, he said that Caltrans offices in San Luis Obispo and in Sacramento are continuing to try to answer all the questions raised by the federal EPA (with which Anderson-and-Foss have long been in correspondence). While Caltrans is continuing to clear the way for what I call that needless and enormously costly Hatton Canyon Freeway, that clearing work, Ruggerone predicts, is likely to take the rest of the year 1987 just to get through all the necessary steps required before any final go-ahead can even actually be given to start the freeway project. While the present intention is to complete the Hatton Canyon Freeway by the end of the fiscal year 1989-90, this eventually may not be possible if the design for the freeway can't be completed in time. In such an event, said Ruggerone, the freeway completion would necessarily "roll over" into the following (1990-91) fiscal year.

Meanwhile a new publication, The Village Watch, is being mailed to box holders at the post office, and it is published by the Carmel Residents' Association, which is taking a strong stand for vigilance. Started by Howard Nieman, Jr. who was a regular watchdog at all the dozens of weekly General Plan Committee meetings, and who recently has become a member of the Carmel Planning Commission, The Village Watch seeks to alert and inform Carmelites in time for them to take part and to become active in the effort to slow down the massive overcommercialization which now so sorely threatens Carmel.

There is still another threat facing Carmel and all its neighbors in the Carmel Valley and down the coast. This is in many ways the taking of a stand which in football would be called piling-on. Suddenly and surprisingly, just before the filing for seats on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board was closing, the mayors of all the cities in Monterey County decided to field what I call a three-candidate pro-business slate to try to knock out the two incumbent board members, Dick Heuer and Patricia Bernardi, along with Dale Hekhuis, a retired General Electric executive, and chairman of the Sierra Club Ventana Chapter. That pro-business slate, fielded by all those Monterey County mayors, includes Jim Hughes, former Pacific Grove city councilman; Monterey architect Paul Davis; and Sandy Skillicorn, Carmel city treasurer.

The area served by the Monterey Peninsula water board is geographically much smaller than the entire Monterey County, yet all those mayors/county wide have set themselves to try to alter the existing water board majority which certainly would be against the best interest of voters in all of the Carmel-related areas.

Earlier in this piece I quoted something from that Denis Duffy Associates city-ordered consultant's report, and I would like to conclude with a reference to the soon-to-be-expected construction deluge. Duffy referred to 21 proposed projects which may soon get under way, and which certainly are likely to add to the accumulated fury of Carmel residents. Also—and already in progress—is the pressure for second stories where there were none, and for second stories that are already in being but now expanding.

Beyond all this, there is now a proposal to use not only a first story for usual retail display purposes but in addition to allow the same retail display in the second story of the same building. The reason for all this is that the businessman involved has had his rent enormously increased in the location he has occupied for many years.

What would I suggest that the city council do in these circumstances? After my 16 years as a Carmel city councilman and four years (1976-80) as Carmel's mayor, I would immediately try for a moratorium which would take effect at once. This would provide a standstill period when council members could stop, look, and listen to a public which is more and more angered by what's going on!

Bud's 'Great Roundup'

EVERYBODY LOVES Bud! And everybody, but EVERYBODY was at Indian Village for the "Western-theme-belated-birthday-roundup-party" to honor Carmel's one-and-only Bud Allen.

Bud, just back from a visit to England and environs, thought he was going to a party for someone else and to his surprise it was a "Bud Celebration."

Stagecoach after stagecoach rolled into Indian Village in the piney woods of Pebble Beach to disgorge around 300 of Bud's pals and pardners. They came in various types of Western attire, from fancy furs and rhinestones to Hawaiian shirts (that's a lot farther West, folks). Lucille Huntington wore a genuine fake fur jacket that Bud bought for her at a Salvation Army store years ago.

Rustler (Russ) Harris had the biggest head, I mean hat. It covered the whole North 40 and was a bright yeller. Deadeye (Dick) Ghent and his Leapin' Lizzie were in typical Wild West garb, as were Car and Dirk-eyed van der Bushwack, I mean Burch. Bruna Odello's guest was Mara Domecq (of Spain) and as Bruna saw the food table she asked, "What is that?" pointing to the artichoke tray.

Roy Rogers, Trigger, Gen. Custer, Jessie James and Butch Cassidy all looked great. Bud himself came in a Tyrolean outfit complete with cape saying, "Sure, this is a Western outfit — West Germany."

Bud's sister Ann Marie Mahoney came from New York. Her identical twin sister, an older sister and Bud all grew up in New Jersey where their two sisters still live. Ann Marie told me she had spent most of her time since arriving here convincing everyone that she — unlike Bud — is "normal." Tim Allen, Bud's son, kept his video going during the party. And son Tom Allen was there also. Bud's daughters were unable to attend.

Bud took the mike long enough to auction off an "orange key to the red room," and bidding went to $6,000 for RLS School before Bud said, "Thank you and do come back to the next party."

Firewater was dispensed, barbecue pits smoked out steaks and sausage to go with the chili and garlic bread before Bud cut the three huge birthday cakes (one for each of one hundred heroes). A mini-dance floor was laid out for hoe-downing to the music of the Grandsons of the Pioneers.

The roundup was planned by Wild Sue and Calamity Sue (Dewar and Hutchinson), Gentleman (George) Yates, Rustler Harris, Car van der Bushwack (Burch), and invitation drawings by Bat (Alex) Anderson. Joe Solis was at the chuck wagon.

LES PETITS CHANTEURS DE FRANCE

Singing is a universal language as The Little Singers of Aixe-en-Provence (France) proved by winning the hearts of all who filled the Carmel Mission Basilica. The "manecanterie" concert was sponsored by Alliance Francaise and their love of singing was unmistakable in the two-hour performance.

Songs included both sacred and secular by such diverse composers as John Lennon, Charles Aznavour, Bach, Tchaikovsky, Handel, as well as a Renaissance motet.

Gerard Mouton, directeur, began the choir in 1961 and his group has performed in the Vatican, all over Europe and for the past nine years in America.

La Provence Restaurant provided an authentic dinner for the troupe. Proprietor Pierre Coutou called that area home during his early years.

LOOMING LUMINARIES

The great pianist Byron Janis will play a benefit concert for the Arthritis Foundation Sept. 26 for only 40 people in the Pebble Beach home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crocker at $500 per listener. This includes cocktails and dinner before the concert. Mr. Janis suffers from arthritis and the research done so far has helped him to continue his musical career.

Lawn luminaries for the Hospice cocktail party tonight will be a 1959 Bentley convertible, a Testarossa, another Ferrari and a Cobra — placed here and there by Pebble's own Mr. and Mrs. Finis Conner, the hosts, and luminary Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood will be there along with 350 shining Hospice supporters.

Jean-Michel Cousteau will fly in from Paris for a couple of days in co.junction with the Monterey Marine Art Expo. Representing the Cousteau Society, Mr. Cousteau (son of the famous Jacques Yves) will attend a small private benefit dinner (again at $500 per) in the home of Col. and Mrs. F. Lee Early Jr. On Sept. 12 there will be a world premiere of The Edge of a Human Tide in Steinbeck Forum ($20). Mr. Cousteau will sign posters at the Marine Art Pavilion in the afternoon. Gary Koeppel brought this exciting package together and he hopes to raise $20,000 for the Cousteau Society plus more from portions of poster sales to bring the total up to $35,000 to $40,000. Gary, who believes in the society because of its concern for the quality of life, gave us this bit of info. We all know the word "Scuba," but do we know what it stands for? Here it is: "self-contained underwater breathing apparatus," which of course, Jacques Cousteau invented.

Tablescapes attendees (the first weekend in October), will be the King and Queen of Spain along with Great Host and Hostess Hank Ketcham and Joan Fontaine, and the Christopher Idone millefiore dinnerware debut. When Mr. Idone couldn't find dishes that presented food to his satisfaction the chef/caterer created his own, which look best with food on them. He maintains, "You don't cook with your tongue, you cook with your eye." He was inspired by the colored, whimsical paperweights created by European glassblowers. Another Tablescapes luminary will be a George Washington dinner service of 1786 with the insignia of a group of French and American officers. Local members of this group are Col. Perry Lampson and the famed San Francisco writer Armistead Maupin.

Other luminaries are polo stars for the Challenge Polo Match on Sept. 20 with captains A. Brooks Firestone and Patrick Brent. The night before there is a black tie dinner ($135) at the Beach Club and a Pavilion Buffet at Collins Field for the game at $50 per. All to benefit Collins Cancer Wellness Center and the P.B. Foundation.

As we mentioned before the Crown Prince and the Crown Princess of Luxembourg, visit right after the world luminary, His Holiness Pope John Paul II.

FROHMAN FANS FLOCK TO CHATEAU JULIEN

"To be or not to be involved...", that was the question that many answered in the affirmative as new Frohman Fan Club members signed up with this active cultural group. Each member was given a black/white lapel fan emblem with a dainty lace edge and a musical note.

Patti Brower (owner of Chateau Julien), offered a variety of wines to sip with the hors d'oeuvres that filled the center table. With everyone relaxed and in a good mood, and (as with any theater group), there was entertainment.

A few numbers from the recent Frohman hit musical of the '60s decade All You Need is Love, were presented on the sunny patio of the chateau. These young people (8 to 18) had learned a lot about the culture of the '60s — President Kennedy, Martin Luther King Jr., hippies and the flower children.

Fifteen (of a cast of 100) talented energetic youngsters delighted fans as they sang Cabaret, Let Me Entertain You,

You remember, Tony and his sister, Alana, are in the movie The Lost Boys and troupers that they are, the participated in the summer training program offered by the academy.

Mikel Pippi, executive director of Frohman Academy, spoke briefly saying, "I am dedicated to putting the performing arts back into the public schools." He also announced plans to do Sound of Music this fall after his trip to the Soviet Union. Mikel leaves today for Moscow with a group of 40 artists invited by the government. He is the lone rep from the stage, with the others drawn from movies, writing and television. While in Moscow, Mikel will work out the final details for presenting Oklahoma in the USSR in 1988.

HOSPICE BENEFITS FROM ANTIQUES SHOW

One quarter of the antique dealers (27) at the Hospice Antiques Show & Sale were from Carmel. We were able to stop at only a few booths but we were impressed with the high quality at Carmel Doll Shop. With dolls the second most collectible items in the country, quality is imperative. He had four stairstep-sized Shirley Temple dolls.

At Keller & Scott we saw a German covered tall cup called a "pokal" and first-rate Oriental decorative pieces. At Phyllis Lapham's there was a charming 1880 French "bougnat" counter, which was used in shops that sold firewood and wine.

ORIGINAL MANUFACTURER'S INFORMATION LABEL-DO NOT REMOVE

Who says you can't afford the best?

To see the difference between investing your money and just spending it, take a closer look at the specs of the Mercedes-Benz 190E 2.3. After acquainting yourself with the price, examine the list of standard features above.

It's all there. Fully independent suspension. Power-assisted braking. Cruise control. Electrically operated windows. To mention just a few. Unlike other car manufacturers, our standard features add infinitely to the value of the car, without adding anything to the price.

Another standard feature with every Mercedes-Benz is the exceptional Mercedes-Benz authorized dealer network. Providing almost every service imaginable, from outstanding financial arrangements to our reassuring Roadside Assistance Program. Extending the value of Mercedes-Benz ownership far beyond the car itself.

Finally, consider the now famous Mercedes-Benz resale value. This reputation has been earned by consistently outstanding resale figures. So that it will continue to satisfy you, long after you've sold it.

Talk to us soon about the Mercedes-Benz 190E 2.3. Because it proves, once again, that the best is often less expensive in the long run.

Like no other dealers in the world.

CARMELITE CHOSEN BY ESPRIT TEAM TO MODEL THEIR FASHIONS

During her daily run in San Francisco in the Marina, Celeste Schneider was stopped by Esprit scouts and was asked if she would be photographed with the possibility of being chosen to model for their "Real People Fashion Catalogs." She was told she would be notified when the judges chose from the hundreds of photographs the scouts entered. She was chosen to be interviewed by Italian photographer Tostani, a makeup artist, Espirit photographers and the Esprit team; she was one of the few called back for a two-day photography shoot. Schneider's photographs were chosen along with a blurb for the U.S. Esprit Catalog with a two-page layout plus separate photos.

Schneider has lived on the peninsula since 1976, attended Santa Catalina Lower School, graduated from Robert Louis Stevenson High School, received a national high school choral award, many acting leads in the drama department, toured England with Grease and toured the Pacific Northwest in Oklahoma, with leads in Streetcar Named Desire and Damned Yankees. She's listed in Who's Who of American High School Students, graduated from MPC, was a member of the honor society, received an alumni scholarship from U.C. Berkeley and is completing her university work there.

SOROPTIMIST PRESIDENT ATTENDS INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION

President of Soroptimist International of the Monterey Peninsula, Joan Pease, highlighted her recent trip to Melbourne (Victoria), Australia at a recent Monterey Soroptimist luncheon meeting. Pease represented the Monterey Soroptimist Club at the Soroptimist International Convention, July 26-30, and was one of 1,300 delegates representing 51 countries to attend.

Soroptimist International is an organization of business and professional women united to give service to the community and, on a larger scale, to the nations of the world.

The international Soroptimist organization meets once every four years to unite Soroptimist federations throughout the world and to prepare a global agenda. The theme of this year's convention was "The Challenge of Change," and offered opportunity to participate in workshops focusing on issues of global importance to women such as economic and social development — employment; education, health — drug abuse; human rights and the status of women.

LISA BRYAN, a Carmel artist, has been invited to be a delegate at the Fourth World Wilderness Congress to be held in Denver Sept. 11-18. organizations which provide arts services to improve cultural amenities to citizens and tourists in Monterey County.

The council goals of the program include providing arts programs to underserved areas of the county and to strengthen minority arts organizations or those who service minority and school populations. Two categories are available: Cultural Institutions Grants (for 3-year-old organizations) and Cultural Project Grants (other non-profit organizations and agencies of local, state and federal government providing cultural programs). Information and grant applications will be available after Sept. 1, at the MCCC office at 424-3043.

NATIONAL GUARD REUNION

A reunion of members of Co. "A," Monterey's own, of the 149th Heavy Tank Battalion, 49th Division, California National Guard, will be held on Sept. 6, at the Monterey Elks Lodge, 150 Mar Vista Drive, Monterey.

A western style barbecue will be held following a cocktail hour from 2 to 7 p.m. Casual attire is permissible.

Co. "A" was stationed at the Presidio of Monterey, under the command of Capt. James Rodriguez, at that time (1947) a popular Monterey police officer who later became a county Undersheriff under Sheriff Jack Davenport. This party is being planned in Rodriguez's honor before he and his wife, Esther, leave for a year's stay in Mexico.

A local committee has tried to trace as many "old soldiers" as possible and especially those who were in the unit in 1947, making it 40 years since many of these local guardsmen have seen each other. Clive Rayne, Jr. of Carmel, and Russ Harris were in this Guard unit and Rayne will be attending the get-together.

Anyone desiring more information may contact Alex Rodriguez at 372-1401 or Hilo Campos at 394-8878.

MONTEREY CHAMBER'S ANNUAL MEMBERSHIP DRIVE HUGE SUCCESS

The Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce's annual membership drive netted the chamber more than $17,000 in new member revenues and added to the ranks 110 new businesses representing a wide variety of large and small organizations throughout the peninsula.

"Superweek Roundup broke existing records and was tremendously successful," claimed Joan Duren Pease, executive vice president of the chamber.

The annual drive lasted one week during which volunteers recruited new members through personal interviews and phone contacts. Special incentives in the way of prizes donated by local and out-of-state merchants were awarded to top producers. The grand prize, a trip for two to Hawaii, was provided by United Airlines and the Sheraton Waikiki Hotel.

Top producers in the drive were Marie Lynch (grand prize winner), Judi Pospishil, Lee Mink, Tracey Moon and Janet Vanbibber.

Several orientation programs have been scheduled in September to acquaint new members with the workings of the chamber. Anyone interested in joining the chamber should contact the chamber office at 649-1770.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

On politicians

On Aug. 28 we celebrated at Carmel Mission Basilica the 198th anniversary of the death of Padre Junipero Serra, the Apostle of California. In 1969 he and Don Gaspar de Portola founded the first of the 21 California missions in San Diego.

Padre Serra remained in San Diego while Portola set out to discover Monterey Bay where they planned to establish the capital of California. Portola failed to recognize Monterey, discovered San Francisco Bay and on the return journey to San Diego with the intention of aborting the expedition, he ran out of supplies. He was unable to find game so he was forced to kill his pack mules and eat them. When he reported to Serra and proposed they return to Mexico, Serra said: "You not only ate mule, you smell like one and you act like one."

This was a brave statement for a Padre to make to a Spanish soldier, but we are told that Portola made no reply, which proves that politicians often are more patient and saintly than their critics.

California politicians have a long and well-established tradition of tolerance, but the electorate has one as well. During these last weeks before the November elections, Oh Lord, we ask a special blessing on the brave political conquistadores who risk life and limb and sanity for seeking office.

We often wonder what prompts them to rush into the heat of the kitchen and submit themselves to every type of public scorn and abuse. We ask if the legitimate fruits of office can compensate for all the flack. Since they are not masochistic, we conclude they are willing to suffer for the common weal. Lord preserve them in the highest of motives and may Californians elect the best of this long-suffering lot.

Is it true that California politicians spend one-half of the year running for office and the other half running for cover? Amen.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

The older you are, the better you work, according to results of a research project. Researchers at the State University of New York at Binghamton analysed the results of 13 different studies done between 1940 and 1983. They found there was a slow, but steady, increase in productivity among both professional and blue-collar workers as they got older. "Too many people place a lot of importance on how aging affects performance, believing older people can't do jobs as well," the researchers concluded. "Our evidence proves that's not the case."

★ ★ ★

People with friends live longer. That's the conclusion of Dr. Lester Breslow of UCLA. Breslow found that the death rate is twice as high for men and three times as high for women who are friendless than for people who have friends.

★ ★ ★

Remember When? 1957 — Do you recall what songs were popular that year? Some of the hits were "Love Letters In The Sand," "Tammy," "Fascination," "Young Love," "Round And Round" and the music from "My Fair Lady."

Foreign students are seeking host families

At this moment, hundreds of foreign exchange students worldwide will never be granted the opportunity to follow their dream of studying in the United States, unless you help.

What is deterring these 15 to 18-year-old high school students from realizing their dream is quite simple: they need a host family to provide a caring and loving home, a home just like yours.

Please take a minute to consider your family as a host to one of these well deserving youngsters. These young ambassadors, presented by the Youth Exchange Service, are eager to share their hopes and dreams, as well as trading their cultural knowledge with your family. YES students provide their own spending money and are covered by exceptional accidental/medical insurance. No value can be placed on the educational prosperity of intercultural understanding that evolves between host family and student.

You can help shape a young mind and make a difference in a teenager's heart by welcoming an exchange student into your home. Contact the Youth Exchange Service, a non-profit organization dedicated to bridging intercultural differences through education our young. Phone toll-free: 1-800-533-0656.

You also don't have to overeat. Or consume excessive amounts of cholesterol. Or ignore high blood pressure. Or smoke. But that's what a large segment of this country's population does. His guidebook tells world how to visit Korea

By ANNE PAPINEAU

WHEN THE U.S. Government invited Kyung Cho Chung to teach Korean at the Defense Language Institute in Monterey, he thought he would have to move to Mexico.

That was more than three decades ago, and when Chung — "K.C." to his friends — moved not to Monterrey, Mexico but Monterey, California, it was to stay.

A 30-year Carmel resident, he lives in a home that blends the best of East and West. He has been a member of the faculty at D.L.I. for 36 years. And he has recently published his fourth book, a voluminous guide to his native Korea.

"It takes a lifetime to assemble a book like this one," states Chung of the 526-page Korea 1987 Guidebook published by Houghton Mifflin and Eurasia Press. He cites a worldwide audience for such a text, spurred by the growing importance of the country it covers.

"There are 10 million people in Seoul, South Korea," Chung notes. "It is the fourth largest city in the world. It has a 76-story building, the tallest in Asia. It is a shopper's paradise. And Seoul is the site of the 1988 summer Olympics."

Korea has undergone tremendous change since Chung left his native land just after World War II.

"I went to Seoul National University, the Harvard of Korea," he says in accented English.

"I studied political science at Columbia University in New York. Then in 1950, the Korean War broke out. I advocated peace. The U.S. government wanted me to teach Korean to government personnel. I've now been at D.L.I. 37 years."

Korea has been the subject of Chung's earlier writings. Macmillan published Chung's insights in Korea Tomorrow, New Korea and Korea: The Third Republic. An editorial he wrote for the Dec. 13, 1972 New York Times titled "Korea Unification" helped to generate dialogue between the two factions of his divided country.

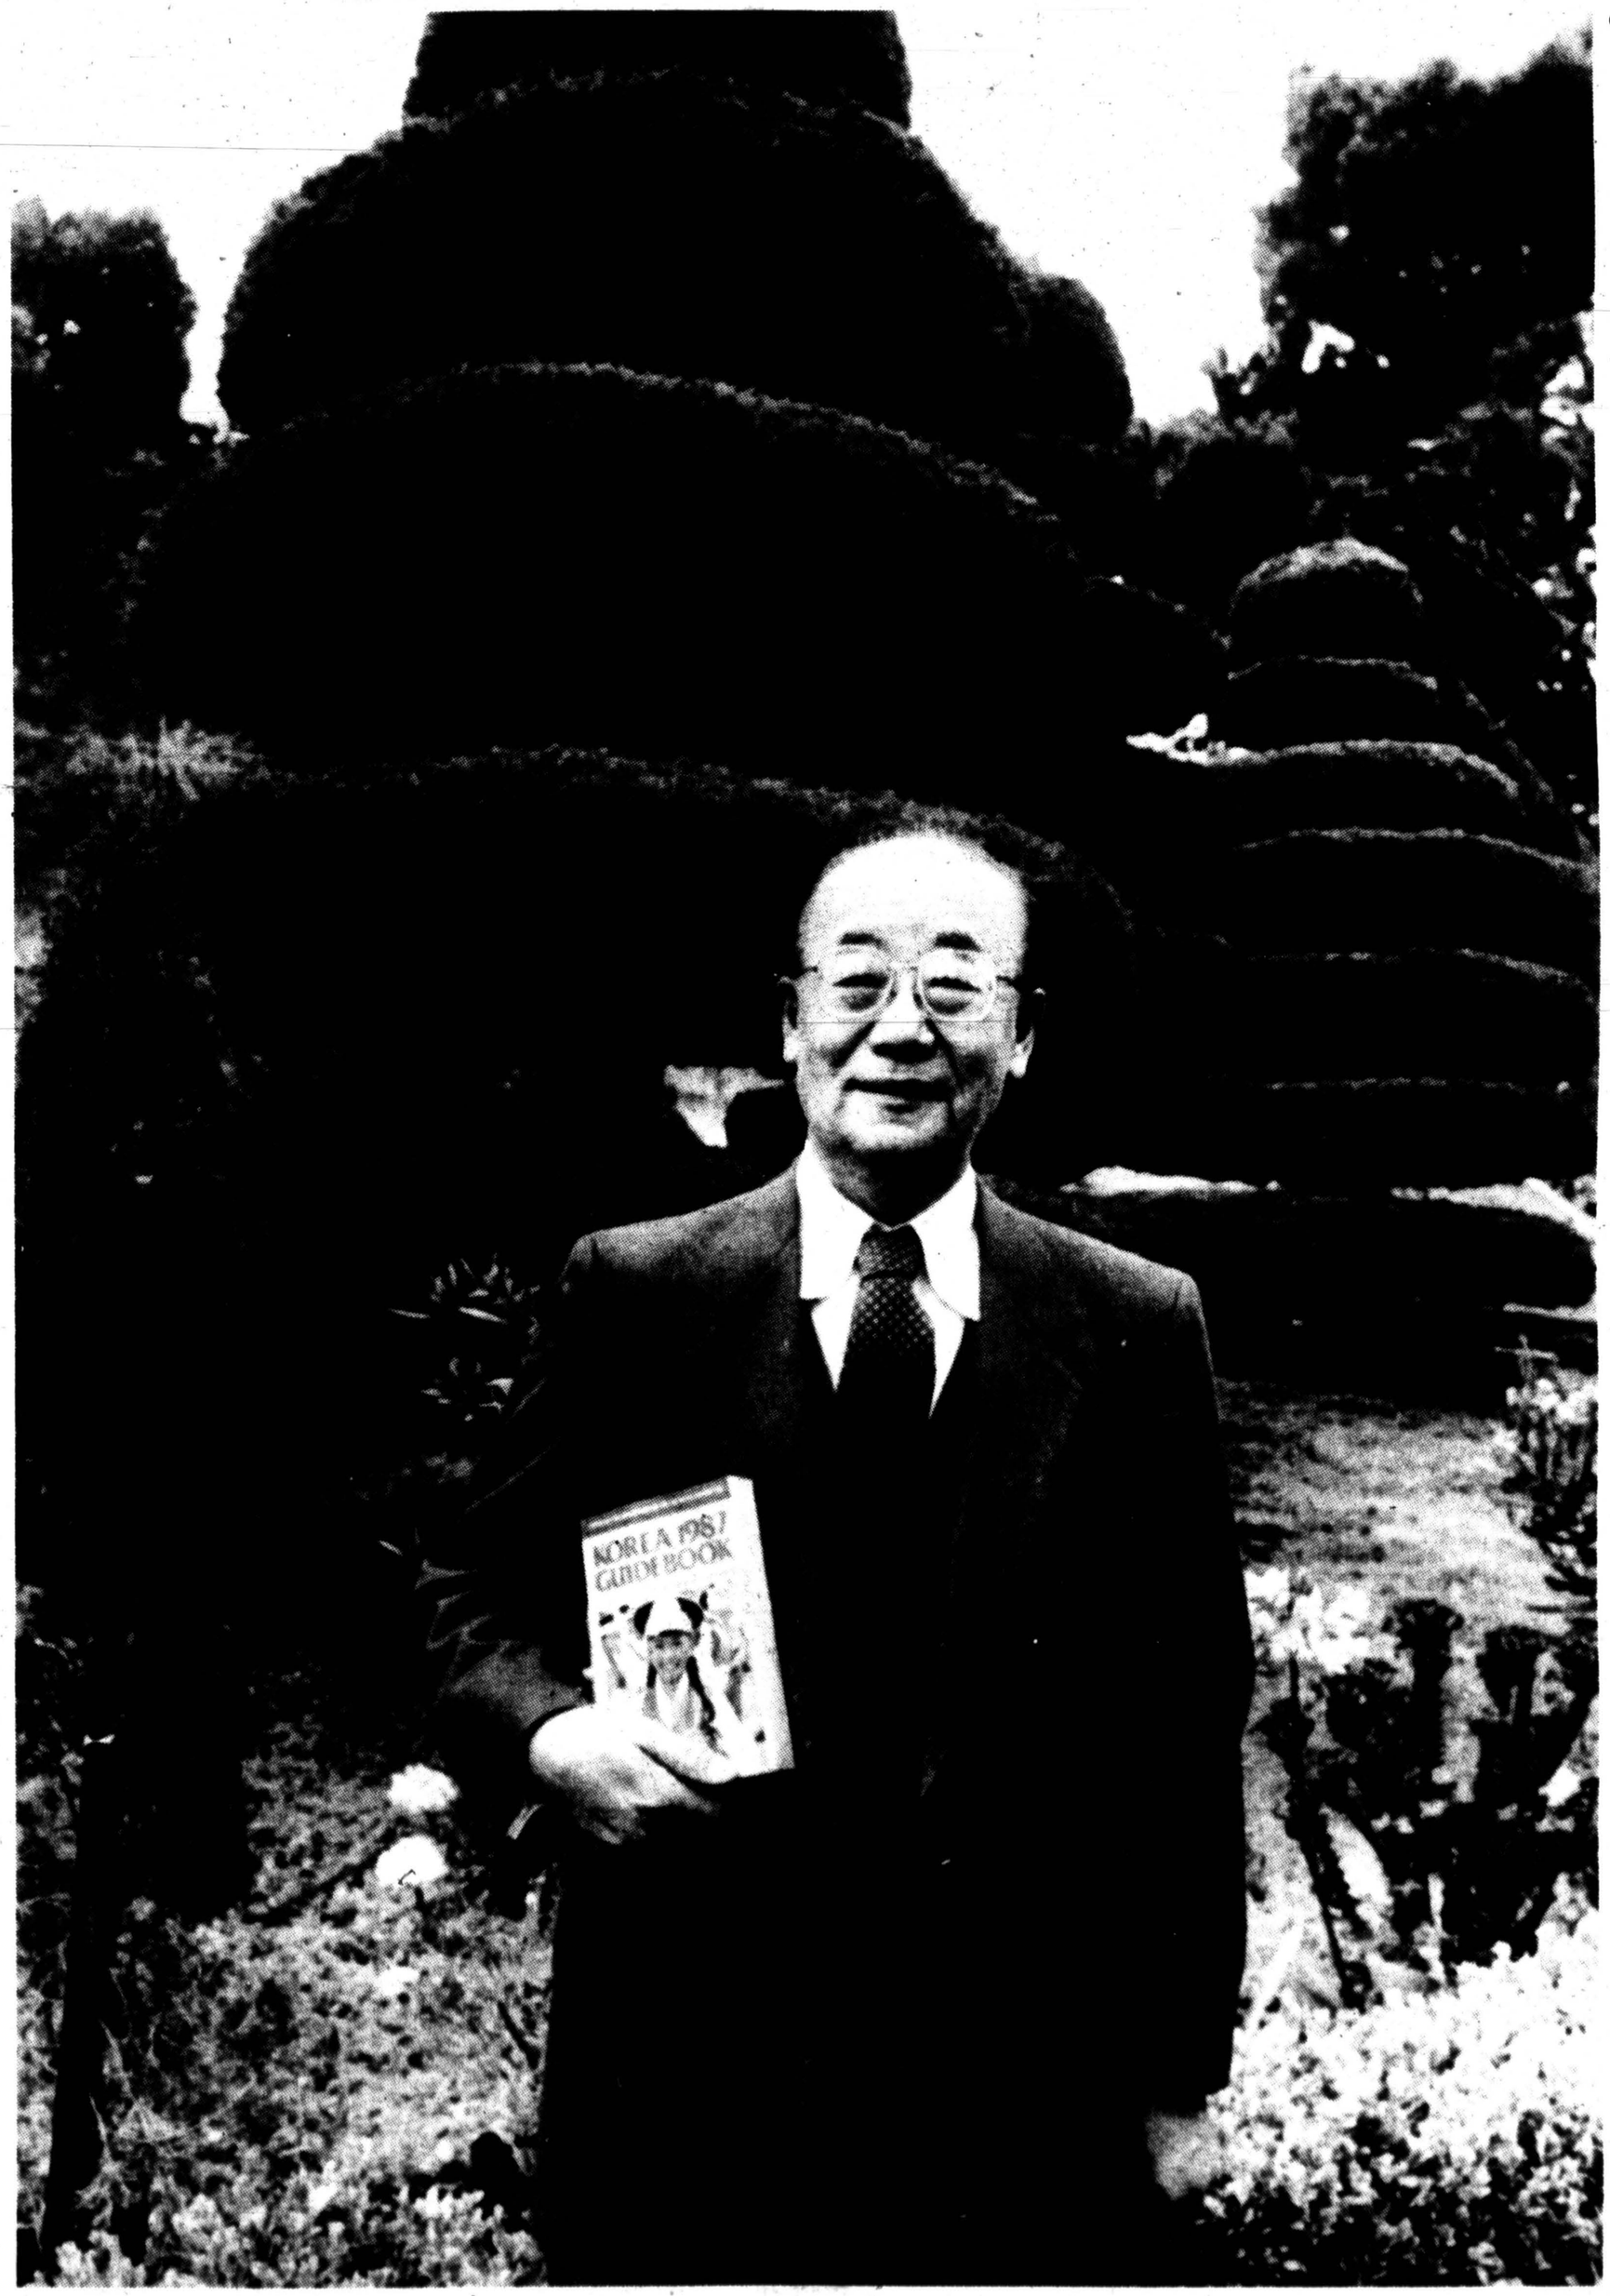
"Korea is very important to the United States," he observes. "The Soviet Union has spread its power in two directions. Korea is a strategic point to confine the Soviet military forces in Asia."

Not merely a distant observer, Chung makes regular visits to South Korea. His research is reflected in his guide, which includes not only background, listings and maps, but also practical advice on matters ranging from how to pack for a trip to Korea, conducting business there and how to travel the Seoul subway system.

In compiling Korea 1987 Guidebook, he was assisted by Phyllis Haffner, a world traveler who also teaches yoga on the Monterey Peninsula, and Fredric M. Kaplan, founder and publisher of Eurasia Press.

Haffner, who is also working with Chung on a book about the Korean presidential succession, has twice visited South Korea.

"It is a place of great contrasts," Haffner asserts. "A concrete and glass highrise is just over the wall from restored palaces and city gates. They've given so much attention to their historic treasures."



LONG-TIME Carmel resident and a professor at the Defense Language Institute, Kyung Cho Chung has compiled the newly published Korea 1987 Guidebook. He was assisted in his work by Phyllis Haffner and Fredric Kaplan. Chung's guide has a worldwide distribution, and is even given to all passengers who fly first-class with Korean Airlines. It will be updated annually and offers assistance in many ways, including tips for attending the 1988 Olympics in Seoul. (Photo by Holly McFarland).

ARTS & LEISURE

Speaking as an American, Haffner says she is "overwhelmed by the economic development of South Korea. At the end of the Korean War the per capita annual income was about $80. Now it is $2,500. The Korean women have come from such restrained and repressed backgrounds, yet that country now has the largest women's university in the world. Ewha University has 20,000 students."

According to Chung, he and his co-authors will update the guide annually. It is patterned after a successful China guidebook also published by Eurasia Press.

•

WHILE MOST South Koreans are taught English in schools, Chung notes that it is important for Americans to respect cultural differences when visiting that nation.

"You first have to think about their feelings. They see you as a stranger," he states. "Be kind, polite, courteous. Americans are usually outgoing and self-centered by comparison. And Koreans respect the senior. In Asia you see young people get up for old people, because elders have so much more experience. You don't smoke in front of your senior, unless he does first. Do not talk loud while eating. Do not cross your legs in front of the senior. Dress properly, even though you are a tourist. Show respect for yourself and others."

Korea, as a manufacturing center with relatively low wages for workers, is indeed a shopper's paradise, Chung affirmed.

"A silk dress that sells for hundreds of dollars in Carmel costs $30 over there," he says.

He adds that bargaining is an important shopping skill in Asia, and Korea is no exception.

"You have a 30 to 40 percent range for bargaining with the price," Chung notes. "Some Americans see the prices and they don't bargain, they feel guilty asking for less. But American products are also very popular over there. They are socio-status symbols. Because of high customs taxes, a Cadillac costs about $150,000 over there. It's very prestigious."

During his recent visits, Chung has witnessed students and workers rioting in the streets of Seoul. South Korea is a country in transition, and he maintains that the 1988 Olympics will have a profound impact.

"The Olympics are a stepping stone that will change the Korean economic progress. The Olympics in Japan in 1964 changed the Japanese economy. South Korea has already spent $4 billion in preparation for the Olympics."

"Up to now Korea has had no relations with the communist bloc, but it will have to with the Olympics. Korea will have a more international role, politically and economically."

THEATER REVIEW

By Joe Guzaitis

Scoundrel times

SCAPINO is a contemporary farce by Frank Dunlop and Jim Dale based on That Scoundrel Scapin by Jean Baptiste Poquelin (Moliere). Buffoonery such as this seems to transcend the ages and get laughs no matter how corny or contrived the situations are. It's as if Milton Berle, Groucho Marx and Jerry Lewis did a comedy special and even though you didn't like any of their individual styles, the combination of their shticks had you rolling in the aisle.

Scapino is like that. There are more cornball elements, slapstick surprises and boffo gags than Henny Youngman one-liners. And it works. You cannot help but be amused by the torrent of zany gags, bits of nutty stage business, and violations of stage decorum that keep coming at you. Also you, the audience, are continually part of the action as the characters make asides or deliver tirades aimed directly at you.

This production is a symbolic one, commemorating as it does the fifth anniversary of the Grovemont Theater company. This is also the fifth production of Scapino/Scapin that Stephen Moorer, founder and resident Moliere-figure, has been involved with. The first was staged in the Pacific Grove Middle School Auditorium when the GroveMont players were itinerant mummers. Then, two years ago, came the permanent theater at 320 Hoffman Ave. Then came the ambitious TheaterFest. Now there are plans for a dinner theater and regional theater. Look out, Ashland!

The plot of this piece, such as it is, involves two young men who have wived it not too wisely, and without their father's consent. To make things worse, they now need a lot of money to keep their demanding doxies happy.

Two servants — Scapino, a shrewd dude, and Sylvestro, an amiable boob — come to the rescue. They manage to wheedle enough money from the fathers to save the young men's pride and domestic stability. Not without some complications however. After a plethora of plotted platitudes, all ends happily as it must.

•

THE ROLES of the two sons are played by Tommie Bates and Bill Reinthaler. Tommie played in "real" Commedia Dell' Arte during TheaterFest last July. Directed by Jeff Hudelson, these bawdy 17th century comic skits were the precursors of plays like Scapino. Bill Reinthaler also has a number of TheaterFest roles, as did the female leads Betsy Griffin, (Giacinta the "valley girl,") and Elan Papa (Zerbinetta, the gypsy bombshell.) Betsy Griffin does the best squeaky delivery since Betty Boop.

Jeff Hudelson, whose past roles are too numerous to mention, plays one of the fathers. James Nesbitt Clark plays the other. The possibilities for ranting, raving, and sputtering as you might imagine, are rife as these two discover what has been going on. Both actors rise to the occasion admirably.

The key roles are Scapino, played by John Rousseau, who is GroveMont's Technical Director and Sylvestro, played by Stephen Moorer, Grovement Founder and Executive Director. These two are such consummate professionals that they continually amaze us with their invention and comic skill. As in How I Got That Story when they last played together, the same good chemistry was apparent.

There are several juicy minor roles: an Italian ristorantessa called "Madonna" whose waiters are wild and crazy guys. Madonna is played by Sandy Williams who recently did a superb job as the doctor in Normal Heart. Michael Lojkovic plays a ubiquitous "bum" named Carlo who wanders through scenes adding to the fun. Michael was a smash in MPC's Charlie's Aunt and American Buffalo.

Director Sid Cato, who also appeared in Normal Heart, pushes this piece along at a rapid pace. There is a method to this madness; it keeps you from having any time to groan over a bad gag, and it heightens the sense of anticipation of what new wackiness awaits.

The sets for the first week are holdovers from Taming of the Shrew and therefore may cause a little deja vu for those who saw that production. But what's one more curiosity in a production like this? After that, the set for Kiss Me Kate will serve for Scapino (with modifications.)

Costumes, with the possible exception of Michael Lojkovic's sailor suit, and Sylvestro's vaudeville get-up are mostly vintage K-Mart. Lady Ramirez reinforces the comedy with suitable silly attire when appropriate. Lighting and sound are by Allen Fremier who keeps things 'a poppin' on cue.

Scapino will run in repertory, alternating weeks, with Kiss Me Kate. Kiss Me Kate opens Thursday, Sept. 3. Scapino returns Thursday, Sept. 10. The two plays will alternate weekends through Oct. 11.

Evening shows are Thursdays through Sundays and begin at 8:30 p.m. They are preceded by a magic show that begins at 8. GroveMont also sports a resident magician, Roy Slater. There is a matinee at 2 on Saturdays and Sundays.

Promising playwrights given artistic boost by the Western Stage

PLAYWRIGHTS take notice!

Only unsung theatrical geniuses who are willing to put their plays to the test, "on stage," in a dramatic setting, need to make submissions. If your play is selected for a dramatic reading at a Western Stage "New Playwrights" night, there is yet another bonus - an audience discussion session following the reading, with an individual critique from experienced members of The Western Stage staff.

New plays and new playwrights have been the life blood of modern theater. Yet, few arenas exist where unproduced plays may get a trial reading.

Tom Humphrey, the artistic director of The Western Stage, hopes to encourage Monterey County playwrights (and those who are writing about Monterey County) to submit their work to New Playwrights. There will be seven readings, the first in October and continuing through May.

Humphrey has chosen Harvey Landa, Joyce Lower and Taft Miller of The Western Stage staff to act as the submissions selection committee.

Beginning immediately, the committee will accept new unproduced plays. After the plays to be read have been selected, a director will be chosen and Western Stage actors and interested community actors will be cast for a dramatic presentation. Audiences will be invited to share the excitement of the informal introduction of new works.

The program is not a contest but an educational experience for author and audience, designed to encourage the growth and development of Monterey County playwrights.

The readings will be held in the Music Hall of the Performing Arts Center at Hartnell College on the final Monday of each month, at 8 p.m.

Authors of the plays selected will receive an honorarium ranging from $25 to $50.

Submissons must come only from Monterey County writers or must be plays about Monterey County. Scripts must be submitted, typed and double spaced in script format, by the individual playwrights or their agents.

Plays may be short or full length.

No adaptations, musicals or childrens plays will be accepted.

On receipt of manuscripts, a notice of receipt will be mailed to the author or agent.

A return Stamped Self Addressed Envelope must be enclosed if the author wants his or her work returned.

Address submissions to New Playwrights, The Western Stage, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas, CA 93901.

Historical group reinstates trolley service along Cannery Row

ALL ABOARD! The Cannery Row Trolley is on route, complete with clanging trolley bells, brass trim and historical commentary.

Operating daily from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., the trolley offers riders a 15-minute round trip on the street of John Steinbeck fame: Cannery Row.

Steinbeck, Ed "Doc" Ricketts and the gang will come back to life as trolley conductors narrate the colorful development of one of America's most famous neighborhoods. And for just one "Steinbuck" ($1 U.S.) passengers can ride the trolley all day, getting off near their favorite sights and boarding later to carry their packages in comfort back to their cars.

Families who come to the Row to spend the day are offered a special deal at the Cannery Row History Center Parking Garage at 275 Cannery Row: For $8 total, they can park their cars all day and get trolley tickets for each family member.

The trolley is the brainchild of Michael Hemp, executive director of the Cannery Row Foundation and project manager for the new Cannery Row History Center Parking Garage. Between trolley rides, Hemp, author of Cannery Row: The History of Old Oceanview Avenue, is busy putting the finishing details on the History Center, a museum and information center for the Row.

Works of Cannery Row researchers, writers and photographers such as Hemp, Pat Hathaway, Sandy Lydon, Tom Mangelsdorf, Randy Reinstedt, Mary Rodriguez and Tom Weber will be available in an adjoining book and gift store, scheduled to open with the History Center in late fall.

Southeast Asian temples, monuments outlined

The Oriental Art Society of The Monterey Peninsula will meet Tuesday, Sept. 8 in the community room of the Crossroads Shopping Center in Carmel. The social program with light refreshments will begin at 7:30 p.m. to be followed at 8 p.m. by a slide-illustrated talk on the Southeast Asian temples and shrines of Angkor, Borobudur and Pagan. The talk will be presented by Colonel Gregg L. McKee.

Colonel McKee is familiar with all three of these early religious monuments from his periods of residence in Southeast Asia and several return trips. He had the unique opportunity of spending a full week at Angkor Wat in 1960, before hostilities in that area made tourism dangerous or impossible.

He is planning to lead a group from the peninsula on a return visit in January or February of 1989 if the situation in Cambodia improves sufficiently and if relations between the United States and Vietnam have been reestablished. The group will also visit Borobudur, Sukhothai in Thailand and Pagan.

Angkor is a large complex of ancient Khmer temples located in some 75 square miles of Cambodian jungle. It was built as their capital by successive Khmer Kings from the ninth to the 12th centuries.

It lay lost, literally swallowed-up by jungle growth, for hundreds of years until French archaeologists opened its beauty to visitors during the 1920s. Many of the artifacts were looted during the Vietnam War, but the architecture and bas relief sculptures which adorn the walls appear to have escaped with relatively minor damage.

The style is Hindu and Buddhist, but with a Khmer touch.

Borobudur is in Indonesia, on the island of Java, some 50 miles from Jojakartra. It is a Buddhist shrine of unmatched splendor and the tallest ever built. It was constructed during the eighth century. Extensive restoration under United Nations auspices has been completed during the last several years.

It too is graced with bas relief sculpture on hundreds if not thousands of square meters of the vertical walls that separate and support the ascending terraces as the story of gaining enlightenment unfolds for the climbing observer.

Pagan is different. It is situated on a plain, today quite barren, which lies in a giant bend of Burma's Irawaddy River. It was mostly built in the 12th and 13th centuries and like Borobudur, the theme is Buddhism. But where Borobudur reaches to the heavens, Pagan extends laterally over a great area which at its prime held some 13,000 Chedis and Pagodas. They were white and gold then. What a sight they must have been, sitting on the red soil beneath the blue Burmese sky which often holds the world's most beautiful clouds.

Then came Kublai Khan in 1287. Hundreds or perhaps even thousands of the structures were destroyed, some say not by the Khan, but rather by the Burmese King to obtain brick for fortifications to defend against the Khan. Fortifications became necessary when the King's bluff failed. He had sent word to the approaching Khan that he would pay no tribute. Did he not lead an army of 36,000,000, consume 300 curry dishes each day and service 3,000 concubines?

Many earthquakes, some in the recent past have also taken their toll, but Pagan today is a fascinating place to visit. A memorable experience is to watch the sun set across the Irawaddy from the top terrace of "Omniscience Temple" from which you can see the lengthening shadows of the 2,000 to 2,500 structures which still remain.

These three unbelievable wonders were built before the Renaissance. But what of malaria, dengue, cholera and other tropical diseases, the monsoon rains, the heat, the humidity.

The public is invited as guests of The Oriental Art Society. There will be no charge. Information on membership in the Society will be available.

Author Ray Mungo discourses on publishing

Author, editor, publisher and literary agent Ray Mungo will be the guest speaker at the next monthly meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Writer's Club scheduled Wednesday, Sept. 9.

His talk is titled "Lit Biz 101, How to Get Successfully Published," which is also the title of his forthcoming book from Dell Publishers in 1988. Admission is free.

The program at the First Presbyterian Church, 501 Eldorado St., Monterey, gets under way at 7 p.m.

Mungo is the founder of Liberation News Service, the international news agency for college and "underground" newspapers in the 1960s and '70s. Educated at Boston University and Harvard, he began his writing career as a newspaper reporter in Massachusetts and moved to the West Coast in 1971.

His eight books include Famous Long Ago, Total Loss Farm, Return to Sender, Tropical Detective Story, Cosmic Profit and Confessions From Left Field.

Three of his books have been Book of the Month Club selections, and several are translated into foreign languages. His articles and stories have appeared in The Atlantic Monthly, Harper's, New York Times, Mademoiselle, Playgirl.

Father/daughter Mastens recite

A FATHER-DAUGHTER team will open the Poetry Amidst the Pine series at the Outdoor Forest Theater when Ric and April Masten perform on Tuesday, Sept. 8.

A production of GroveMont Theatre Outreach, the program will begin at 8:30 p.m. at the theater located on Mountain View at Santa Rita in Carmel. Admission is $6 general, $4 for seniors over age 55 and children under 12.

Although he has eight books of poetry to his credit, Ric Masten's work is primarily written to be heard — live — either spoken or sung. He says his favorite audience is made up of people who would normally regard an hour with a poet as cruel and unusual punishment.

Masten resides in Big Sur. Since 1968 he has traveled across the country giving readings, concerts and workshops in hundreds of colleges, churches, prisons and hospitals. He has been called a "roving humorist," a "street philosopher" and a "stand-up poet" and likened to such notables as Will Rogers, Ogden Nash and Pete Seeger.

"Poems composed for the ear are like music," says Masten, "and people should listen, moving along with them as such, without pausing to reflect as you would with the printed word. What I do is more song than manuscript."

April Masten, who now makes her home in the San Francisco Bay Area, is a singer and songwriter who last year released the album, "Not So Much to Want."

Introduced to the classical and flamenco guitar at age 8, she had composed more than 60 songs by age 15. She has joined her father on national tours, and her songs have been recorded on his albums.

April Masten received her bachelor of arts degree in music from San Francisco State University, where several of her pieces premiered in campus recitals. During her college career, Masten made her living singing in clubs, festivals and weddings. She continues to give concerts throughout California and the Western states, and also performs at churches, rallies and benefits. She sang for the National Organization for Women at the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco.

Masten was also invited to give 12 concerts in the People's Republic of China, where her songs were described as "speaking honestly about life, love and liberation — the immortal themes."

For more information or group rates, call 649-6852. For reservations, call Center Stage, 649-5561.

SPEAKING poet Ric Masten will be joined by his daughter, singer/songwriter April Masten, during a Tuesday, Sept. 8 performance at the Outdoor Forest Theater. The 8:30 p.m. concert opens the Poetry Amidst the Pines series.

Sheets retrospective assembled

THE FIRESIDE Gallery of Carmel presents a retrospective exhibit of watercolors and acrylics by artist, designer, muralist and teacher, Millard Sheets.

The artist recently celebrated his 80th birthday, having produced six decades of work, including murals, mosiacs, architectural designs, oils, watercolors, and acrylics.

Among his design achievements are the four-story granite facade on the library building of Notre Dame University; and the 30-foot mural depicting 200 years of California history, mounted in the lobby of the San Jose International Airport.

It was Millard Sheets and his contemporaries, Phil Duke, Phil Paradise, Barse Miller and Rex Brandt, who founded the movement now known as the California Watercolor School. During his career as an art professor, Sheets established the art department at Scripps College, Claremont. Later he became director of the Otis Art Institute of Los Angeles.

Continuing with his teaching career, totally dedicated, he conducted watercolor workshops around the globe, from China to Africa, to Mexico, to Europe, and throughout America.

Fireside Gallery has exhibited the work of Millard Sheets for a dozen years. This retrospective can be viewed through Oct. 1. Fireside Gallery is located in Carmel, off Dolores Street, between Fifth and Sixth in the Pantiles Court (behind Bill Dodge Gallery.)

Turn-of-the-century artist Manuel Robbe highlighted

WORKS BY turn-of-the-century artist and printmaker Manuel Robbe will be featured in an exhibition opening Friday, Sept. 4 at Pasquale Iannetti Art Galleries. An opening reception is planned 6 to 8:30 p.m. at the galleries located across from the fire station, Sixth and Mission, Carmel.

Born in Paris in 1872, Manuel Robbe developed his art during the years of controversy preceding the revolution of early 20th-century modern art. Robbe studied painting at the Academie Julian and the Ecole des Beaux-Arts; he learned printmaking early on, exhibited at the Salons and won a medal at the Paris Exposition Universelle in 1900. Following the productive years of his youth, Robbe served as a pilot in the First World War; afterwards, as happened to so many after the experience of war, he lost much of his creative impulse. Though he lived until 1936, he is known for his richly printed color aquatints created at the turn of the century, images fully evocative of the days of the Belle Epoque.

From 1898 Robbe had the support and encouragement of the great print dealer-publisher Edmond Sagot, who had contributed enormously to the flowering of printmaking among avant-garde artists in the last decades of the 19th century, helping to win the acceptance of color prints as a serious art medium. Although Robbe stayed shy of the avant-garde movements - though there is a mysterious symoblist quality in some of his works - and did not participate in the dominant field of color lithography, his aesthetic and technical accomplishments in his chosen specialty of color aquatint deserve a respected niche in the history of the period.

With the rebirth of a market for prints as collectable, democratically available works of art, color prints came to be regarded as objects meant to be displayed on walls, like paintings, rather than kept closed in portfolios. Robbe's very painterly aquatints served the function well, for he developed his prints with a depth of tone and modeled mass more often seen in oil paintings than in the graphic arts, yet still with a printmaker's regard for the special textures and sparkle of works on paper.

Most of Robbe's prints are color aquatints with some etching or drypoint. Some have just a very small area of drypoint or etched work - it may take some hunting to discover - delineating form and giving an almost hidden point of focus to the composition, in the darkest shadow beside just one of a group of figures, or in the contour of a model's coiffure. Some prints are pure aquatint, others are a fairly equal combination of the line work of drypoint or etching and the broadly inked areas of aquatint, with overlaid brushstrokes where stopping-out varnish was applied to achieve gradations of tone. At other times Robbe created prints of pure drypoint, so rich with burr and surface tone that they are sometimes mistaken for aquatints.

LES RAMASSEUSES de Betteraves (Pickers of Sugar Beets)*, is representative of the color aquatints and etchings by Manuel Robbe on view at Pasquale Iannetti Galleries in Carmel. The 1902 etching is signed in pencil.

A Secret Ingredient: Time

This house may, probably will, stun you at first. It will take several visits to learn all its nooks, crannies and spaces; and even then you'll miss some.

It's up Highland Drive, past The Highlands Inn, past Tickle Pink. Be patient, then stop at No. 152, a good hundred yards past No. 151 and, oddly, on the same side of the street. Come through a little gate, then down a few steps on the stone path to the entry patio. For the moment ignore the path that goes on down the hill.

Take the right hand door off the patio and you'll enter the enormous 33x20 living room. The walls are redwood board batten, the ceiling is cathedral style with beams; there are two deep window nooks and other picture windows looking over the trees to a vast vista of the sea. A wide deck just outside spans this great panorama.

Had you taken the left hand door instead, you'd come into the wood panelled kitchen, a reflection of farm kitchens we remember: skylights, wood walls, a cooking and service island, two corner cabinets, one of which opens to a hidden sink. The floor is vinyl tile, there's a Franklin stove, a wall-wide hutch, beautiful chandelier, pots and pans hanging, and Dutch doors north and south.

The master suite is just past the great stone fireplace and down a short flight from the living room. One step opens to reveal a secret liquor locker. This bedroom is surrounded by picture windows looking seward. Walls and ceiling are wood, and there's room to spread out. The bath has tub, shower, a skylight and a window.

So much for the main level. There are 2 more levels below this (and a 4th if you count the sunny little terrace down the hill), 3 more bedrooms and 3 more baths, plus a potting room with still another bath. Some of these can easily be closed off from the main part of the house, although a secret staircase leads down from the living room to the lower region.

The lot is about a quarter-acre, quite steep, and the house conforms to the terrain. It was built before 1920, has been improved several times since, and is in excellent condition. It takes many years to "grow" a place like this. $465,000.

CARMEL LEGENDS

No. 32

Just a door or two south of Ocean Avenue on the west Side of Lincoln Street stands one of the more interesting of Carmel's older commercial structures. LA RAMBLA, an imposing two story Spanish building was built in 1927 by Mrs. Josephine Baber. Architect for the project was a gentleman named Koepp, the builder was Lyle Stoney. The unique tiles used on the building were made to order in Seville, Spain, as were all of the wrought iron fixtures which were excellent examples of the work of one of the building's first occupants, designer Fredrik Rummele. Rummele operated antique and art shops on the lower level of the building, two gracious apartments occupied the second floor, and the spacious rear area of the lot has always been the site of a nursery...Williams "Shop in the Garden" for the past 40 years or so! Current owner of the property is Lucille Kiester, the delightful daughter of the original owner.
